2 HOURS STAY OF DEATH FOR SLAYER HOCH!

SIX BOSTON PILGRIMS ARE CURED AT FAMOUS SHRINE

REV. FR. EDWARD F. SAUNDERS.

Rector of St. Anne's Church, Somerville, who vouches for miraculous cures of pilgrims to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Canada.

SOMERVILLE PRIEST CONFIRMS MIRACLE REPORT AT STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE.

From the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, in Canada, comes to-day to Boston a story of great miracles unequalled since the early days of the church.

The blind can see, the deaf can hear, the lame can walk, the deformed become whole, while piously visiting the famous Canadian shrine.

Out of the 300 who made the pilgrimage to the shrine in the party conducted by the Rev. Edward F. Saunders of St. Anne's Church, Somerville, seven have been miraculously cured.

Father Saunders vouches for the cures in a special telegram to the BOSTON AMERICAN. Relatives of the people who have benefited by their faith have received the glad tidings from them direct.

The cures are especially miraculous because of their character. A cataract of the eye, a deformity of the hand, a deafness that surgeons had pronounced incurable, a hip trouble that made its victim almost helpless—these are among the cases restored to health.

There seems to be no possibility for the faithless to question the cures. From the diseases themselves, the healings speak of their Divine power behind them.

Good Priest Is Happy.

"Words cannot relate the sight I have seen," cried Father Saunders with ecstasy, when he came from Ste. Anne de Beaupre to Quebec, on the way home to Boston which the party is expected to reach to-night or to-morrow.

"There were thousands in attendance at the service. The spectacle was a magnificent one. The religious ceremony was intensely imposing; the devotion of the worshippers was unspeakably solemn. Then came the miracles which it was our blessed privelege to behold. I am indeed a happy man."

The party of pious Catholics, under the leadership of Father Saunders, left Boston a week ago for Ste. Anne de Beaupre. Among them were many suffering from various ills, hoping that their visit to the famous shrine might be rewarded by health as in previous instances.

No worse case in all the company was there than Frank O'Neil, of No. 9 Lamson street, Cambridgeport, who has been well-nigh helpless since he injured his spine in a trolley accident eight years ago. For five years he was unable to move hand or foot; since that time he has dragged himself about on crutches and managed, with the assistance of a brother, to conduct a small cigar store in Cambridge. Upon starting on his trip with Father Saunders, which his piety led him to believe might be efficacious, it seemed as if he was not well enough to go. He entered the church with two crutches; he left it with one, wonderfully improved.

Vouches for Miracle.

Annie A. Reynolds of Revere had a deformity of the hand, which had made the member useless since she caught it in a machine some years ago. When the service at the shrine was over she could use the hand. Father Saunders vouches for the miracle.

These were two of the seven from Boston and vicinity who firmly believe themselves to have benefitted by a modern miracle.

Father Saunders verifies the report in the following special dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is true that six miraculous cures have taken place in the party from Boston at the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre. Mrs. James Kane of Lowell is cured of deafness. Miss Ella Stoddart of Melrose Highlands is cured of a cataract on her left eye. Miss Annie Reynolds of Revere is cured of a deformity of the hand. Mr. Frank O'Neil of Cambridgeport had hip trouble and used two crutches. He is partially cured and now uses only one crutch. Mrs. O'Reilly of Union square, Somerville, had a serious knee trouble. She is cured. Miss Adele Boutin of Somerville has had constant and terrible headaches. She is cured.

We know of many other partial cures, and in our own party God's favors were sent to others than those I have named.

SCOLLANS SENTENCE FIVE YEARS

His Wife, in Court When Penalty Is Fixed, Pleads Vainly for Mercy.

END OF FAMOUS CASE

Though a pathetic plea for clemency for her husband was made by Mrs. Thomas J. Scollans to-day to Judge Bond, Scollans was sentenced to not more than five nor less than three years in State Prison for being an accessory to the bribing of Juror Charles H. Milliken, who was one of those hearing evidence in the famous teaming fraud cases. Three days of that term are to be spent in solitary confinement.

Mrs. Scollans, who was called to the stand by Scollans's counsel, B. B. Dewing, before sentence was pronounced on the convicted man, was far more affected than her husband. She pleaded thus to Judge Bond:

"I have a little girl eight years old. My husband is our only support. All our property has gone since this trouble began. I have no one to support me if my husband is sentenced. We were in comfortable circumstances before this trouble started, but now I have not a cent in the world with which to clothe and feed myself and our child."

Miss Margaret Scollans, sister of the defendant, pleaded that Scollans's aged mother would die if her son was sent to prison:

Judge Bond, in passing sentence, said:

"The defendant has done much to interfere with the exercise of the law. In sentencing this man, the effect of bribery on the people should be considered. The defendant cannot say he is not responsible. The effect on the lower class should be considered. Crimes of this sort weaken the confidence of the people in trials by juries. Many people in Suffolk County believe that juries are bribed, and when a case is lost people go from the court believing that wealth has purchased the jury."

MUST HAVE FULL POWER OR PEACE FAILS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 28.—The entire peace fabric which is being laboriously constructed between Russia and Japan will fall to earth at the first meeting of the peace plenipotentiaries unless the credentials of the Russian envoys show that they are endowed with plenary powers.

Japan's envoys will make it their first business at the Portsmouth conference to examine the credentials of the Russian conferees.

If they do not give M. Witte and Baron Rosen full power to act the conference will come to an end right there.

Mr. Sato, spokesman for the Japanese envoys, innocently and in an offhand way made this highly important admission.

"In these negotiations for peace," Mr. Sato was asked, "the Japanese commissioners have all the necessary authority to agree upon terms, have they not?"

"Oh, yes," was the answer.

"And is it your understanding that the Russian envoys will be clothed with similar authority."

"It will be the first business of the Japanese envoys to see their exact status—to examine their credentials and ascertain if they are empowered to treat," was the reply.

It will be recalled that the exact authority with which the Russian plenipotentiaries are clothed has been involved in great doubt. There have been suggestions that the Russians were not acting in perfect faith. Concealed in the meshes of Muscovite diplomacy, it has been hinted, is a purpose to send the Czar's envoys here to learn the temper of the Japanese terms and provided with a loophole of escape if those terms should not be to the liking of the Czar's ministers.

BEDROOM CAUSES CHANGE OF VENUE

WINSTED, Ct., July 28.—Settlement of the estate of Sophronia St. John, widow of Frederick St. John, which was begun in the Probate Court here, has been transferred to the Probate Court in Barkhamsted, because surveyors found that the house stood partly in Barkhamstead and partly in Winsted.

The bedroom in which Mrs. St. John died in January is located in this town, but the bedroom in which Mr. St. John died in January is located in Barkhamstead. Inasmuch as he voted and paid taxes in Barkhamsted, it was decided that the estate of his wife should be settled in that town.

Wealthy Woman Comes to Murderer's Aid and Her Money Secures Temporary Reprieve for Him---Hoch Calm in Face of Death.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 28.—"Bluebeard" Johann Hoch, standing in the very shadow of the gallows to-day, gained a stay of execution from Governor Deneen from noon until 2 o'clock.

The Governor stopped the execution to decide on reprieve in view of money having been raised for an appeal to a higher court.

Twice to-day there has come delay. First from 10 o'clock till noon, to give Hoch's friends time to make a last frantic effort to save him for a time at least by raising the funds for an appeal; then again from noon until 2 o'clock.

Governor Deneen's act is now taken to mean that if the money has been raised, as stated, there may be a reprieve. In that event the case will go into the courts again.

Mrs. May Wilson, a wealthy woman, who figured in the Streeter case, and Dr. Liston H. Montgomery were the direct cause of the delay from noon till 2 o'clock. They offered money and jewels enough to pay for an appeal. This fact was communicated to the Governor, and hence the delay.

BUOYED BY HOPE IN GALLOWS SHADOW

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 28.—Just before noon to-day "Bluebeard" Johann Hoch, professional wife-poisoner and bigamist, stood awaiting the end. Hope still held him up, but blanched face and restless, ever-moving hands told of the strain and the natural fear of the grim gallows which was almost visible from where he stood.

There was a last frantic effort made to save his neck, for a time at least. The money long sought, needed to appeal the case, was raised. At one of those tense dramatic moments which precedes a death on the gallows Dr. Liston H. Montgomery and a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Wilson dashed up to the jail in a cab and sought Sheriff Barrett. They said they had the $700 necessary to complete Hoch's appeal to the Supreme Court, and Montgomery showed a big roll of bills.

Sheriff Barrett Helpless.

"I can do nothing," said Sheriff Barrett. "It's up to the Governor. I had fully $3,000 offered me last night by Dr. McNamara, Abe Frank, Lou Houseman and a lot of sporting men, but I am powerless. Only Governor Deneen or an order of court can stop the execution."

When he learned that the necessary money had been raised Attorney Isidore Plotke declared he would go before a court immediately and make a last desperate effort to save Hoch on the ground that the money is at hand to perfect his appeal.

"Let me have the money, quick," said Plotke to Montgomery, rushing through the jail, "and I'll get a stay."

"I've only got part of it," said the doctor.

"Come with me in a cab," shouted Plotke, "and we'll get the rest of it. I can stop this thing yet."

The two men left the jail at once, and nervously Hoch stood awaiting their return. New hope gleamed for him, and his tone, which had been depressed, grew lighter as he conversed with his jailers and the minister who had come to comfort him in his last hours.

While the last test of the gallows was being made and while Hoch's attorney, Isadore Plotke was making a last desperate effort to raise the necessary money to make an appeal, Hoch talked freely of his case.

Said Hoch:

DECLARES INNOCENCE.

"I die at the hands of murderers. It is a case of an innocent man sent to the gallows because he is too poor to appeal his case. I don't want to die until the Supreme Court passes upon my case. If that tribunal declares me guilty and not entitled to a new trial, I'll die contented, although I never killed my wife.

"It is hard to be hanged without fighting to the last ditch. It is a case of lack of money. Look at Lawyer Patrick, the New York murderer. He has been given every chance just because he is wealthy.

"I do not wish to convey the impression that I am censuring Governor Deneen. I do blame the law which does not supply a man with funds to defend himself when he is too poor to provide them.

"I did not have a fair trial. My case was prejudged. I was tried in the press of Chicago instead of the court. Lies were told about me and alleged confessions printed."

Governor Deneen gave his final decision in the matter after three attempts were made to have him grant a reprieve. Attorney General Stead advised him not to interfere further with the execution of sentence, as it would create a precedent. Before making his final decision, Deneen held a telephone conference with Assistant State Attorney Olsen. At the capitol it was said that the reason for refusing the reprieve was:

COURT AGAINST HIM.

"That Hoch first was sentenced to be hanged June 21, and that he requested a reprieve in order to be able to present his case to the Supreme Court in the June term. The court then being in session, neither Hoch's attorney nor any of his friends has shown to the Governor any error in fact or law.

"The only point raised by the defendant was as to the right of a woman whom Hoch had married to testify against her husband in a criminal case. On that point it appears that the State proved that before Hoch had married the woman in question he had married another woman who is still living and another from whom he had never been divorced. The Supreme Court has decided against the contention raised by counsel for Hoch."

The specific crime for which Hoch was condemned is the murder of one of his half a hundred wives, this being Mrs. Marie Walcker-Hoch, whom Hoch poisoned slowly with arsenic. At the time of her death it was supposed to be a natural one, then an investigation began and the marvellous history of crime which lay behind the man was exposed.

FAMILY AWAY, STOLE JEWELS WORTH $500

Mrs. Mary H. Hutchins of No. 64 Main street, Malden, returned from a visit to find that her home had been broken into and $500 worth of jewelry and silverware stolen.

Apparently the thieves, carefully studying the habits of those occupying the house, made entrance by means of false keys and thoroughly ransacked the place. Mrs. Hutchings found jewelry cases broken open and bureau drawers turned upside down.

As soon as possible Mrs. Hutchings furnished the Malden police with a list of the missing articles. These include a gold watch, six rings, a pair of bracelets, one dozen stickpins, one dozen silver pearl-handled knives, gold locket and chain, two pairs of eyeglasses and a large number of small articles.

The thieves left behind them absolutely no clue. None of the neighbors saw any suspicious characters about the house. Lieutenant Foley of the Malden police force says that the work was done by experts who knew how to go about things and made themselves familiar with the habits of the people in the house before making the effort.

Mrs. Hutchings is the widow of J. Clark Hutchings, who was one of Malden's prominent citizens.

FACING GALLOWS HOCH REVEALS SECRET OF SUCCESS IN WOOING

"Fear More Effective Than Tenderness," He Says, "Violence Is the Way to Win Love."

Johann Hoch, the greatest of all the "Bluebeards" of modern times, admitted while in Chicago jail and awaiting execution on the gallows of the death sentence imposed upon him for wife murder, that he had married at least fifty women. He would not confess, however, that he had killed even one of them. To the last, even while relating the most incriminating evidence against himself, he would say: "I am innocent. It was the public hue and cry caused by the newspapers which caused the jury to convict me."

To his last hour the man who is accused by the police of so many systematic murders was calm and callous. He did not show the slightest sign of repentance. His life story was told by him to a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent. It was one of the most extraordinary recitals which ever came from human lips. He admitted that polygamy was his life business and he called his marriages "matrimonial investments." He married only women who had property and took good care to be the sole heir when they died—and death soon followed in most every instance.

HOCH'S ART OF LOVE-MAKING

Hoch told how he studied the art of proposing marriage. He advanced the brutal, astonishing theory, born of his brutal nature, that women are won sooner by fear than by love, and that force is more potent in subjugating the feminine heart than tenderness. He said that by watching other men ask women to be their wives he learned how to force scores to accept him as a husband.

"So far as I know," said Hoch, who is a glib talker, and possessed of that indefinable quality called personal magnetism, "I am the only man who knows the business of making love scientifically. I learned it when a youth in a village in Germany, near Bingen-on-the-Rhine. I used to hide on a cliff overlooking the river Rhine, which was a great trysting place, and there I watched five or six hundred men 'pop the question.' They were all clumsy and most made the mistake of being gentle.

"In the old times men went after women with clubs. They knocked them down and carried them off while senseless. Women really like that kind of wooing. It was my style modernized to suit altered times a nd the law.

Began Tenderly.

"I will tell you how I propose, and all the world knows I am the most successful wooer in history. I begin very tenderly, and as a preliminary tell how long I have been in search of a mate that I thought worth my while. The woman then knows a proposal is coming, but I am not ready yet to ask her. So she cannot refuse at that point. I then tell a long story about my life, making my character according to the personality of the woman. The story of my life must in all cases be full of romance of some kind. Sometimes a suggestion of the occult is effective; mystery is always good, tales of terrible persecution, of vague but awful crimes and even insanity are good upon occasion.

"After this long narrative picturing myself as a forceful character of some sort, I turn suddenly, seize both the woman's hands, squeeze them as hard as I can—so they will hurt—and ask her in as menacing a tone as I can command if she will marry me.

"Then is the time for violence. I don't carry any club, but my hands are pretty strong.

Never Strikes Woman.

"Now don't get the idea that I am altogether a brute, because I use violence on occasion to women. I always regret the necessity, and am most careful not to give any more pain than absolutely necessary. I never strike a woman.

"On that cliff near Bingen, I saw the homeliest fellow in the town win the belle everybody was after, and nobody supposed he had a ghost of a chance. He wouldn't have if he hadn't forgotten himself and choked the girl almost to death. When she opened her eyes they were full of admiration. She accepted him, to the astonishment of both of us. He almost spoiled his good work by bursting into tears of repentance. They are happily married and living in Mainz now, and I don't think either of them understands quite why she accepted him.

"I have, I regret, found it necessary to choke one or two, to hold one estimable lady so that her head was under water for a minute or more. I accidentally broke an English widow's wrist before she would see the force of my arguments. Then there was the little French darling. On the spur of the moment I trod on her little bare feet with my boots. I was so sorry for her afterward, and she was so good about it.

"These women all accepted me, as did nine out of every ten others I proposed to. The few times I failed were cases where I lost my nerve or somebody interfered, a thing I take the utmost pains to avoid.

"Avoid Jealousy," He Says.

"Never show any signs of jealousy, no matter how much cause you have. Always let your wife and fiancee know that you are boss. If you take her out to dinner, don't hand her a bill of fare and ask her what she wants. Just say, 'You are going to have steak and potatoes,' or whatever you want. Then she will respect you for your strong mind and love you because she can't help it. Don't ask her, 'Would you like to go to the theatre?' Just say, 'I'm going to take you to the theatre.' When a woman finds out that you won't let her think her way, she will be glad to think as you do.

"I never kept any record of my wives for fear it would fall into the hands of the police. I couldn't give you a complete list if I felt like it—there were too many of them.

First Wed for Love.

"My first marriage was no matrimonial investment. I was just simply head over heels in love with little Fraulein Anna Malten, the daughter of an artist in Vienna, where I was studying medicine and chemistry. She was a very pretty, dark-eyed girl.

"I took her for a row on the Jedlersee, not far from Vienna, one evening, told her that I was a pretender to the throne of Denmark, wove in a lot of circumstance and detail, which I had made up carefully during the last six months, and asked the question.

"'I can never marry you, I am afraid, Johann,' she replied.

"'Then this is the end of your life and maybe mine,'" and I made a rush for her.

"Well, I had to be pretty rough. I hate to think of it even now. The boat was upset in our struggling. We were some distance under water when she suddenly stopped fighting and I was afraid she was drowning. I brought her to the surface. I was on the point of admitting myself beaten and would have begged her to let me escape from town without arrest.

"Before I could say anything she found my hand and gave it a little squeeze that I shall never forget. Of course, I knew I won even before she said: 'You needn't drown me, Johann—I guess you really do love me.'

Took Poison; Died.

"That was in 1881. Two years later her health began to fail. I did everything a devoted husband could do. Medicines seemed to do her rather more harm than good. I took her to New York, hoping the change might benefit her. One day she drank some poison from my laboratory, and I found her dead upon her bed. I am afraid she became despondent on account of her health. The New York police were so impudent as to insinuate that I had poisoned her deliberately. I left town one night without letting anyone know where I went.

"Mrs. Rodder was the first English woman I ever married. My yarn for her was to have been a repetition of the Nihilist tale. But at the last moment something she said made me think she would not be much interested and I told her a story, invented as I went along, that I was a pirate operating on the coast of China. It was a good enough idea, but fell flat in places because I had not gone over it beforehand. She was interested, but refused. Something about her refusal made me angry and I used more force than I should have in the shaking up I found necessary to administer.

"I was very much ashamed of myself when I found I had broken her left wrist. Of course, I did not dare show my regrets.

"She forgave me and I really thing felt greater admiration for me than any other of my spouses. She left me a nice piece of property.

Beaten at His Own Game.

"While on the way to America I met the only woman in the world who could beat me at my own game. She frightened me into marrying her. She flirted with me and insisted on meeting Mrs. Hoch. I introduced the women and the day before land was sighted my wife mysteriously disappeared. In some way she fell overboard and I think Aida had a hand in it. When I started back on the same boat Aida was a passenger. I had no intention of marrying her. I knew she had little means. One night she came into my stateroom and proposed to me in my own style. She had brought a pistol with her and talked to me with its cold muzzle against my back. I, like a fool, had told her some private things that put me in her power. When we landed she marched me to a minister and we were married.

"All through the next two weeks I was in fear of my life. She suggested my doing various things with my wife's property. In the end she got it all away from me."

POSTPONED DEATH OF HOCH TILL NOON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 28.—Jailer Whitman announced at 9 o'clock to-day that the execution of Johann Hoch would be postponed until noon in order to give Hoch every possible chance for a reprieve. The confidence of the condemned man that some miracle would still intervene between him and his fate impressed the jailer, notwithstanding that Governor Deneen had given his final decision in the case and that Attorney Isadore Plotke had then abandoned his efforts for a supersedeas.

Where official interference with the execution could come from was not apparent, but Whitman determined to do all he could for the murderer.

"The execution will not take place until about noon," he said. "There is no hurry and we have until 12 o'clock. Something may happen and we may as well delay it an hour or so."

Soon after breakfast had been served to Hoch, Guard George Phillips appeared at the door of the death chamber with several bunches of nasturitums—the favorite flower of the condemned man. He had often worn one of the yellow and red blossoms in his coat, brought him by his minister or some visitor, and the guards, knowing of his fondness for the blooms, had taken up a little collection and purchased a lot of the flowers for him. Phillips, indeed, had frequently bought flowers gor the prisoner and several other guards asked to be allowed to contribute to the fund to-day.

HOCH WAS CAPTURED THROUGH AMERICAN

After a chase extending over several weeks, Johann Hoch, the wife poisoner, who dies to-day on the gallows, was arrested in New York on January 30 and identified by a picture published in Hearst's New York American. Meanwhile he had been sought in this city, from where it was rumored he would take a ship for Europe. As a result the lookout here was so close that even if he came here at all he departed immediately for New York.

When arrested at No. 546 West Forty-seventh street, New York, he first said his name was Henry Bartel and denied any knowledge of Hoch, but afterward he admitted that the American pictures of Hoch were those of himself, and while he was being taken to police headquarters he confessed that he was the man wanted.

Hoch pursued in New York the same tactics used in the West. Mrs. Catherine Kimmerle, who rents rooms on the second floor of No. 546 West Forty-seventh street, went to the police station and said she had been struck by the resemblance of a man named Henry Bartel, who was occupying one of her rooms, to the picture of Hoch in the American.

Soon Proposed Marriage.

She then said that Bartel had come to her house on the preceding Tuesday in response to an advertisement and had engaged a room. Before he had been there three days he had made himself her helper about the house, peeling potatoes and making beds, and then he proposed marriage to her. The stories of the same kind she had read concerning Hoch had aroused her suspicions.

Detectives O'Neill, Cahill, Frye and Kerns were sent to the house. Hoch was out, and O'Neill went up to his room to wait for him. He returned in a short time, and as he entered O'Neill turned up the light and said:

"How do you do, Mr. Hoch?"

"How do you do?" Hoch responded, then catching himself quickly, he added: "I'm not Mr. Hoch."

Without more ado he was taken to the station and put under examination. First the newspaper pictures of Hoch were shown to him, and he said:

"Yes, those are my pictures, but I'm not Hoch, and it will all come out in the wash."

In answer to questions, he then said he was a salesman for a wholesale wine house in Frankfort-on-Main, but admitted that the house had no local connections. He also said that he traveled between New York, Philadelphia and Boston, but did not go to the West. Then he added that up to two years ago he had kept a saloon at No. 390 East Ninety-ninth street, but when asked to locate this more definitely he made blunders, which convinced the police that he was not telling the truth.

Had $625 in Pocket.

Search of his clothing revealed a revolver, a pocketbook, three card cases and an address book. In the pocketbook were six $100 bills, five $5 bills and some small change. It also contained a billhead, with the name of the business house torn off, showing purchases of furniture amounting to $120, made within the last six days. This was signed "Paid in full, T. Shanley."

In his room were found nearly a dozen new suits of clothing. In most cases the tags had been torn from these, but those that had not showed that the garments had been bought in Western cities, among them Chicago, Peoria and Seattle. In his hat were found slips from a Chicago house bearing the date of December 4 last.

Detective Sergeant Fogarty went to the station with a telegram just received from Chicago saying that Hoch had often used the name "Henry Bartel," and furnishing a description of the former that exactly fitted the prisoner.

Fogarty took Hoch to headquarters, and on the way he admitted that he was Johann Hoch, and that he was the husband of Mary Fischer, of whose murder he was first accused. He said he lived at No. 6,340 Union avenue, Chicago, but left that city four days after his wife's death to come to New York.

He denied that he had married more than one other woman besides Mary Fischer, but did not give her name. He also told the police that he had furniture worth $2,000 stored in Chicago, and that he was willing to go back without extradition proceedings.

SAYS CARLTON FED HER DATES FULL OF POISON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 28.—New evidence against Frederick E. Carlton, the alleged "Bluebeard," now in a cell in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, charged with larceny, and suspected of killing two of his many wives by tetanus germs, came to-day in a letter from Chief of Police Hayden of Rochester to Inspector Adam A. Cross.

Chief Hayden stated that Mrs. Lulu Ketterling, who declares Carlton fed her poisoned dates, had positively identified two recent photographs of the prisoner as the man who married her under the name of De Rodriguez and deserted her.

"I consider this identification by Mrs. Ketterling one of the strongest links in the chain of evidence against this man," said Inspector Cross to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

"Not only does this identification prove that Carlton's matrimonial schemes were almost national in scope, but we have the direct charge that Carlton, after robbing his wife, tried to kill her with dates inoculated with a mysterious poison."

Mrs. Ketterling said the man represented himself as a wealthy Brazilian planter. She said that she came to New York and stopped at the Astor House, where Carlton paid her every attention and tried to impress her with the manner in which he entertained her.

After marrying she declares he procured all her jewels by trickery and got back the diamonds he had given her before the marriage.

"I became suspicious of the man," Chief Hayden quotes Mrs. Ketterling as saying. "His actions aroused me, and I decided to leave him.

"The night before I left for my home in Rochester he gave me some dates. I ate several and became deathly sick. I felt numb and stiff all over my body, but by the exertion of extreme will power I overcame the effect of the poison and started for my home."

23 KILLED ON ENGLISH RAIL

LIVERPOOL, July 28.—Twenty-three people were killed and many injured when an electric express train on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railroad, bound from Liverpool to Southport, collided with an empty train standing at the Hall road station. The first car of the express, which was crowded, was smashed to pieces, and only six of its occupants escaped.

Almost immediately after the crash the wreckage burst into flames.

JEWS REJECT BRITISH OFFER IN EAST AFRICA

dangers and difficulties attending the estab-Zionists' executive committee has reported to the congress here against the proposed Jewish colony in Africa, because of the dangers and difficulties attending the establishment of the colony. An expedition started in December, 1904, to explore the region, at the suggestion of the British Government.

The expedition landed in Mombasa in British East Africa and left the train some 500 miles from the east coast.

The territory in question, Guasso-Ngischu, is situated close to the equator, includes 400 square miles of impenetrable primeval forest and 2,000 square miles of barren land, unsuitable for any kind of cultivation.

There remain approximately 4,000 square, of which about 1,000 square miles is suitable for corn growing.

The territory is entirely unpopulated because former inhabitants were massacred by hostile tribes. It has no roads and no paths except elephant tracks. It is approached through dense forests infested by wild beasts and dangerous native tribes. The expedition was repeatedly attacked by hostile natives. A savage, warlike negro tribe inhabits 250 square miles of land close to Guasso-Ngischu and they regard Jewish colonists as enemies.

The Zionists' Executive Committee recommended that the thanks of the congress be conveyed to the British government for the generous offer and for its friendly feelings toward the Jewish nation.

MAYOR DUNNE IS TO MEET GOV. UTTER

Visits Friends in Providence Until the Tammany Pow-Wow Outing.

"I believe in municipal ownership most emphatically" said Mayor Edward F. Dunne of Chicago to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, as he started for Providence with Mrs. Dunne, where he is the guest of Charles Alexander at Rumsick Point. "Chicago will run all its own street railways within two or three years."

Mayor Dunne meets Governor Utter of Rhode Island, and members of his staff, at the big clambake which Mr. Alexander is giving to-day. Informally he tells the Rhode Islanders his views of the Chicago situation, and how beautifully their scheme of ownership of the street railways is working out.

He has decided to speak at the big Tammany pow-wow to-morrow, despite the objections raised by Michael S. Drew, who warned the Mayor against the Curleys. This decision was announced after a talk with Mayor Collins.

W. T. A. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Democratic State Committee took the Mayor out for a short walk to-day and it is understood straightened him out on some of the political tangles of city affairs.

The chief executive of the Windy City was in excellent spirits. When he met the committee from Tammany at Worcester he had not fully made up his mind that he would speak at the Tammany pow-wow. He wanted first to have an interview with Mayor Collins.

Not even the arguments advanced by Representative Jeremiah Good, who met him at Springfield, and President Fitzgerald, of the Democratic City Committee; Fred M. J. Sheehan and Alderman James Curley, who boarded the train at Worcester, sufficed to make him decide favorably for the club until he had seen Mayor Collins.

Called on Mayor Collins.

Mayor Dunne was driven from the South Station to the Parker House, and Mayor Collins was notified by telephone of his arrival. A few minutes later the Chicago Mayor, President Fitzgerald and the two Curleys were on the way to Brighton in an auto. It was midnight before they returned to the hotel. Then, in answer to a question as to whether he would attend the Tammany Club outing, Mayor Dunne said:

"Yes, I shall speak. When I accepted the invitation to speak on municipal ownership before the Tammany Club, I knew nothing about the leadership of the organization. I had supposed that it was a political organization of good standing. I did not receive the letter of Mr. Drew until Wednesday morning. The Chicago papers printed it before I got it. That was the first I had heard of Alderman Curley or that he had served a jail sentence for some offence against the civil service laws.

"I then wired asking if Mayor Collins was to be there, and was informed that he was, whereupon I said that if the organization was good enough for Patrick A. Collins it was good enough for me and that I would be on hand Saturday."

Feared Mayor Was Lost.

For a short time to-day it was gravely feared that Mayor Dunne had become confused and lost in the labaryinthian ways of Boston. At 9 o'clock he was nowhere to be found. Cards of his numerous callers were accumulating at the desk of the Parker House at the rate of ten per second, and the ranks of the waiting steadily gained recruits.

Bell boys were running wildly in all directions. Rumors arose and were contradicted with lightning rapidity.

"He's in the breakfast room."

"He's in his room."

"No, he isn't, he's not to be found."

These were a few of the reports.

The waiting ones grew anxious.

"Has he left the hotel?"

No one had seen him leave.

"Has he received any callers?"

No one knew.

Presently, much to the relief of every one, he appeared in the corridor of the hotel. Carrying a travelling bag and accompanied by his friend, Charles Alexander of Providence, he walked rapidly toward the anxious group, and announced that he was just starting for Providence to visit Mr. Alexander.

A score of newspaper men surrounded him. Half a dozen cameras yawned hungrily before him.

Political personages stretched welcoming hands toward him.

Not Overcome by Cares.

Mayor Dunne does not look as though the cares of family and State weighed heavily upon him.

He is of medium height and stocky build, with square shoulders, a well-shaped head and a pleasant, strong featured face.

He has sharp gray eyes, a closely cropped moustache wherein a few gray hairs are sprinkling the black, and a ruddy complexion. His eyebrows are unusually heavy, and he has a round nose which is a sign of a good fighter.

His mouth is generous in size and determined in outline.

When he laughs, which is often, his whole face lights up and a merry lot of wrinkles gather at the corners of his eyes.

He wore, for his trip, a gray business suit, a dark tie, and a straw hat of conventional shape.

"Good morning, everyone," was his greeting. "Well, I'm sorry I can't talk with you. I'm just leaving for Providence.

He pulled out his watch, a modest affair of gold, open-faced.

"How long will it take to walk down to the station?" he asked.

"Twenty minutes," replied Mr. Alexander. "We have no time to spare."

'What have you to say about municipal ownership?" someone asked.

"I'm going to talk about that on Saturday."

"And you are saving your views until then?"

"Well, it's a big subject and I haven't time to talk now. Needless to say that I believe in it emphatically."

Appears Athletic.

Mr. Alexander motioned his readiness to start.

Mayor Dunne moved quickly toward the door, still surrounded.

He laughed and chatted easily with the crowd.

He is a nervous, quick, alert man, and gives one the impression of being more or less athletic.

He is a trifle more than fifty years of age, but he does not look it.

His walk has the spring of youth, and he is tremendously vital and full of life.

And in all his speech and action he gives the impression of a man thoroughly in earnest.

Mrs. Dunne did not accompany her husband to Providence. She is a charming woman of much intellectuality, and thoroughly devoted to her husband's interests and to her ten children, who range in age from seventeen to two years.

Six years seems to be their age dividing point, as five are over that age and five, including the twins, under six years.

It is Mrs. Dunne's first visit to Boston, and before she goes she will be much entertained, visiting among others a long-time friend, Mrs. MacDonald of Quincy.

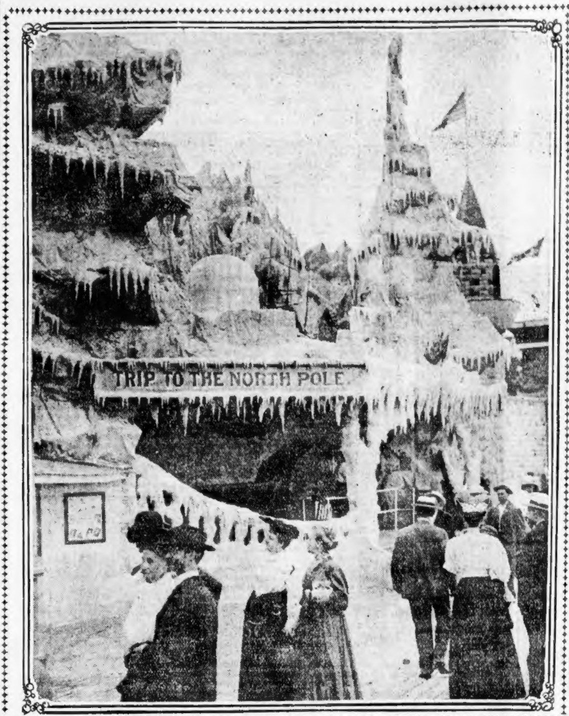
AMERICAN AGAIN INVITES YOU TO VISIT PARAGON PARK



CROWD ABOUT TRIP TO NORTH POLE, PARAGON PARK.

Another Admission Ticket and Coupons for Four Shows Are Given Away Sunday.

The BOSTON AMERICAN invites its readers to Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach, again.

Thousands of BOSTON AMERICAN readers secured free admission last Monday and Tuesday to the Park and to four shows by means of the ticket and coupons printed in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN preceding.

Those who were guests of the BOSTON AMERICAN on these occasions had a delightful time. Those who were not, well, as one expressed it, "They don't know what they missed."

So flattering was the reception given this offer by the general public that the BOSTON AMERICAN repeats it.

In the next BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, July 30, there will be printed another ticket and another set of four coupons. The ticket will admit you to Paragon Park next Monday or Tuesday, July 31 or August 1, and the four coupons will admit you to these four shows:

Johnstown Flood.
Trip to the North Pole.
Laughing Show.

In planning to use this ticket and the coupons next Monday or Tuesday, the BOSTON AMERICAN readers are cautioned to heed this important rule:

Limit on Admissions.

The ticket for admission to the park will be good on next Monday or Tuesday until 7 o'clock p. m., and will not be good for admission after that time at night. But this 7 o'clock limit does not apply to the coupons for the shows. They will be good throughout the evening. Remember—7 o'clock limit on the admission ticket, but not on the show coupons.

So make an early start in order not to waste the admission ticket. If you get there before 7 p. m. you can get in free and stay all the evening.

What You Get Free With the Sunday American

Tickets of admission to Paragon Park, which includes the open-air vaudeville, the band concerts and illuminations.

Coupons admitting to:
Johnstown Flood.
Trip to the North Pole.
Laughing Show.

Last week, when the BOSTON AMERICAN first made this offer, it did so confident that it would please its readers. That confidence was justified. Literally thousands cut out the admission ticket and show coupons, and enjoyed themselves at the "Electric City by the Sea," as Paragon Park has been aptly styled.

So, in repeating this offer, the BOSTON AMERICAN knows that it will meet popular approval.

Why not?

Worth Fifty Cents in Cash?

The offer is worth 50 cents to every reader in cash value alone. The admission to the park costs a dime. The admissions to the four shows in next week's offer cost a total of 40 cents. That's a grand total of 50 cents.

And the four shows make an unusually entertaining combination.

The Johnstown Flood is a realistic representation of that fearful catastrophe which devastated a city and killed hundreds of human beings. It is thrilling as a scenic production and marvellous from the standpoint of stage craft. It illustrates, as nothing else can, how a fair city was wiped out by a raging torrent of water.

The Figure Eight Roller Coaster is exhilarating. Hear the girls' voices rise in shrill staccato as the cars slide swiftly but surely over the long and lofty track, up and down the dips and rises and around the reversed curves which are the particular characteristic of this "Figure Eight" style of coaster.

Johnstown Flood, Figure Eight Roller Coaster, Trip to Pole and Laughing Show, Free.

Whew!

Keep Cool at North Pole.

I know that it's hot. But let's go on the Trip to the North Pole and beat Lieutenant Peary. So we step on the slowly revolving platform and are borne to the Land of the Midnight Sun.

Oh, I went to the Laughing Show,
Ha! Ha!
And I went to the Laughing Show.
I never laughed so much before.
And I'm laughing yet, Ho! Ho!
That's the Laughing Show. Nuff sed!

And—

You must bear in mind that the admission ticket alone to the park guarantees you lots of fun. There's the vaudeville show afternoon and evening. There are the band concerts, spirited renditions of popular and classical airs. There's the midway, the beautiful lagoon, the crowd, the booths, the noise of the "barkers," inviting one and all to "Step right inside, right inside."

Beautiful at Night.

And at night there is the wonderful illumination by electricity of the entire park, from the lowest gate lights to the big round ball of gleaming incandescents at the tippety-top of the tower—a spherical beacon that shines far out over the waters on one side and over the land on the other.

So it's "Ho for Paragon Park." Cut out the admission ticket and four coupons from the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN of July 30 and go to Paragon Park next Monday or Tuesday, July 31 or August 1.

The BOSTON AMERICAN invites you.

OVER $100,000 FOR SUFFERERS

BROCKTON, July 28.—The trustees of the $100,000 relief fund contributed for the sufferers from the boiler explosion at the Grover shoe factory last March have practically completed its distribution.

Thirty-two savings bank accounts have been opened by widows receiving benefits, and seven mortgages have been discharged. Three cases have been reported of men who were apparently uninjured in the explosion, but who have since become incapacitated for work through nervous disorders.

Since the first appropriation of $40,000 was made, a child has been born to Mrs. David Rockwell, wife of the dead engineer, at Stoughton. This brings the number of children to fifty-four. This, with the prospective increase of three more, warranted an additional appropriation of $2,500, and the children's fund totals $42,500. The payments from the children's fund will begin in October of the present year, and each child is to receive not less than $500 in the aggregate.

BEGINS SUIT TO GET RECEIVER FOR EQUITABLE

Policy-holder Demands a Division of Surplus and Winding Up of the Company.

FEWER POLICIES ISSUED

NEW YORK, July 28.—The first step toward having a receiver appointed for the Equitable Life Assurance Society will be taken to-day by J. Wilcox Brown of Baltimore, who will file a suit in the United States Circuit Court here praying for such appointment. He will also demand a division of its surplus among the policyholders and a general accounting by its officers. He wants the receivers to gradually, prudently and economically wind up the affairs of the company.

Mr. Brown is a policy-holder of thirty-seven years' standing. Intervening petitions have been filed by a number of policyholders, including Benjamin Dellheim and Julian B. Hart of Boston.

Mr. Brown makes serious allegations against the new Ryan management. He denounces Ryan's stock control and claims that the present board of directors is an illegal body under the charter.

The charge is made that the vast surplus fund has been piled up, not for legitimate purposes or for policy holders, but to secure illegal and personal gains, and out of it have been paid improper and extravagant salaries, commissions and expenses.

The directors of the Equitable Society, at their meeting yesterday, listened to the reading of the records for six months back, abolished the office of chairman and voted to materially reduce the number of pensions. It has developed that, in addition to the $25,000 annual pension to the widow of Henry B. Hyde, a pension of $18,000 yearly to Mrs. James W. Alexander has been voted, to take effect at his death.

The society's income for the first six months of 1905 was $38,790,138, an increase of $2,386,810 over the corresponding six months of last year. The number of policies issued in the same time, however, materially decreased, 61,083 being issued as against 65,592 for the corresponding time last year.

BOY ROBBER CONFESSES

MIDDLEBORO, July 28.—Hugh Agnew, aged fourteen, who was found tied to a tree in Thomastown, when put through the "third degrees" by Policeman Ichabod Thomas, confessed he had originated the plan, which he put into execution. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, who were away from home, returned and discovered their ward, the Agnew boy, missing, as well as bank-books and a watch. The neighborhood was aroused, and the youth was found, duly bound, not far from the house.

The boy has been with the Thomas family about six months. He will be returned to the institution from which he was taken.

PRESENT RESIDENCE TO MAINE SCHOOL

SACO, Me., July 28.—Mrs. Annie Calef Thornton and her daughter, Miss Mary Thornton, of Magnolia, Mass., who gave Thornton Academy of this city its handsome library building, have notified the board of trustees that they will build a residence for the principal as a gift to the school.

STILL IN DARK ON MOTH WAR BY PARASITES

Experiments Costly and Results Cannot Be Fixed for Some Time.

KIRKLAND TO DOCTORS

"We have spent a great deal of money experimenting with parasites to rid the State of the gypsy and brown-tail moth, but we don't know how we are coming out. The parasite experiment may be a complete failure."

This declaration was made by Professor A. H. Kirkland, State superintendent of the work against moths, at the quarterly outing of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health on Gallups Island. There were nearly 200 present, including many prominent physicians from all over the State.

"During the past three weeks we have received from Europe and Japan four or five sets of different parasites which we are tenderly nursing. They are all natural enemies of the moths where they appear in Europe.

In their native state in Europe the brown tail and gypsy moths are held in check by fungus diseases, birds and at least sixty parasitic insects. They were brought to this country, however, without these checks. We hope to restore the balance of nature by the introduction of these insects, but it is a matter of conjecture how we will come out."

Professor Theobald Smith, in discussing the moth question, incidentally mentioned the common house fly and mosquito as being pests to be especially careful of. "We should guard against these two insects," he said, "and should hold them in check, for it is a well-known fact that they spread tuberculosis and typhoid fever by eating the bacilli and then casting it off.

"The house fly, in particular, should be guarded against and not allowed to get at our food supply, for they seem to become simply intoxicated by the odor of decomposed material, and eat from it accordingly. Then they fly to food which people eat and in this manner communicate the germ to human beings through the food they light on."

WOMAN WAKES TO SEE BURGLAR

FALL RIVER, July 28.—Mrs. Charles Wigley of Boston, who is a guest of Mrs. N. J. R. Chace, of No. 110 Underwood street, was awakened in the early morning and saw that the screen of her window had been cut away and the head and shoulders of a man were inside the room.

"What do you want?" asked Mrs. Wigley.

The man seized a shoe which was on the floor near the window and ordered her to keep quiet. Mrs. Chace, in the next room, was awakened by the conversation, and when she spoke the man hastily backed through the window on to the roof of the piazza and jumped to the ground.

Fifteen minutes later an attempt was made to enter the home of Seth A. Borden, on Hanover street, treasurer of the Hargraves and Parker Mills. The noise the man made attracted the attention of a servant, and as he started toward the window the man disappeared. An attempt was made on Wednesday morning to enter the house of Mrs. Smith, assistant to Dr. Swift of the Central Congregational Church.

SAVED WOMAN SLIPPING FROM MAN'S GRASP

Companion Was Trying to Pull Her by Hair to Deck on Yacht.

REFUSED TO GIVE NAMES

LYNN, July 8.—Daniel Hennessey and Edward Golden, fishing from a small skiff at the mouth of the Pines River, heard a cry for help. Turning, they saw a woman struggling in the water by the side of a yacht, while her male companion was holding her by the hair and vainly trying to pull her aboard.

The two men pulled for the yacht and just as the strength of the man on the yacht was giving out they caught the woman in their arms, just as she was slipping from the grasp of her companion, and pulled her into their boat.

After working over her for some time they succeeded in resuscitating her, and at her request rowed the pair ashore.

Both the man and woman refused to give their names. They said that they had been at the Point of Pines, where they had taken a boat and were rowing about at the mouth of the river, when they had been suddenly upset and their boat filled and sank.

How the man came to be on the deck of a yacht they did not explain.

Had it not been for the timely arrival of the two men from Lynn, the woman would have drowned, as she was unconscious when taken from the water, and the man's hold was slipping and would have failed an instant later.

ACCUSE WOMAN OF SETTING FIRE

WAREHAM, July 28.—Miss Alice G. Shaw of South Carver, a middle-aged woman, and her brother, Lewis J. Shaw, are held for the grand jury in $1,000 each by Judge Washburn on the charge of setting fire to a house belonging to Miss Shaw. Four years ago Lewis J. Shaw was tried on the charge of killing Thomas Conway, but was acquitted on the plea of self-defence.

Several witnesses said they saw Miss Shaw and her brother near the house at the time of the fire. Gustavus Atwood, deputy forester of Carver, said he entered the house and found the stairs on fire, with pieces of burned blanket, burlap and charred wood lying about an oil can half full of kerosene in a closet.

Charles H. Kennedy said he helped to extinguish the fire. The front door was braced on the inside with two long boards. He met Miss Shaw in the road, he said, and she told him he was trespassing on her property.

FIRE IN SUBWAY AT SCOLLAY SQ.

A fire in a ventilating fan shaft in the subway, near Scollay square, caused clouds of smoke to be forced through the outlet of the shaft in the graveyard at King's Chapel. A crowd gathered and from the density of the smoke imagined a big fire was in progress in the tube.

The attendants as Scollay square station were notified and trains stopped. Men with fire extinguishers found a lively blaze in the fan chamber. The fan was stopped and the fire easily put out. Little damage was done. The fire was probably started by a cigar stub thrown into the chamber from a passing train, or by spontaneous combustion.

HYDE A HERO AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, July 28.—James Hazen Hyde is enjoying a brief vacation here from the storm and stress of Equitable investigation, and among his society friends he is being treated as a returning hero. The sympathy felt for him was first displayed this afternoon at the West Chester Polo Club practice game. He is in town as the guest of T. Suffern Taller.

He was given a royal reception. Every one shook his hand, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet entertained him at an informal tea party on the club veranda. Among the others about the table were James Kernochan and Mr. and Mrs. Craig Biddle. He was also entertained at dinner by Mr. Taller, and to-day a luncheon will be given in his honor at the Clambake Club. Equitable affairs apparently are not weighing heavily on "Jimmy's" mind, for he is having a jolly good time.

DUEL FOR GIRL ON TRESTLE

NEW YORK, July 28.—With elevated trains thundering by on either side of them John Smith and James Bloomfield fought a duel for a girl on the trestle of the New York Central Railroad at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Park avenue. Bloomfield had a heavy steel wrench, while Smith had a revolver, with which he wounded his rival twice and then made his escape by jumping thirty feet to the street.

Both men had worked together on the railroad for a long time, knowing they were rivals.

JORDAN WINS MORE BLUES

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 28.—Eben D. Jordan's stable has captured four more blues at the Monmouth County Horse Show. The victories were: Lord Burleigh and Lord Belfast in the high stepper class; Hildred in the class suitable for a gig; the Jordan park team in the class for drag or body brake, and the dainty mare Tangerine in the class over thirteen hands.

Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor and Mrs. John Gerken each secured two blues, while Alfred G. Vanderbilt, with three entries, had to be content with a red ribbon for his high steppers.

If It's Good Enough for Collins It's Good Enough for Dunne

[With Acknowledgments to "The Earl and the Girl."]

Mike Drew sent word to Mayor Dunne:
"Don't mix with Tammany."
But Tammany replied at once:
"We have no infamy.
For Collins, Mayor of the Hub,
Has given his O. K."
And then Chicago's Mayor prompt
These famous words did say:

"If it's good enough for Collins, it's good enough for me.
For he is quite particular, as anyone can see,
I'm sure that I need Tammany as fully as does he.
And, if it's good enough for Collins it's good enough for me."

Half a dozen different clubs
Are striving, every one,
To get the inside of the track
In entertaining Dunne.
And now the question's settled, sure,
They know the only way
Is through the Collins sanction, for Judge Dunne will only say:

"If it's good enough for Collins, it's good enough for me.
I'll need a Mentor now and then, as surely as can be,
There never was a mayor more particular than he.
So, if its good enough for Collins it's good enough for me."

And so the Boston programme for Distinguished Mayor Dunne—
The things he's going to say and do
In earnest and in fun,
Do not depend upon the cards
Our politicians play,
But on the words of "P. A. C."
For Dunne will simply say:

"Whatever does for Collins will also do for me.
There's no man more particular than my friend, 'P. A. C.'
I'm sure I'll never come to harm in doing same as he,
For, if it's good enough for Collins it's good enough for me."

CANADIANS TO CROSS BOSTON ON ELEVATED

Way Found Around Law and They Will Make Visit as Originally Planned.

The Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles will come to Boston as originally planned.

The vexing problem of how to get them through Boston has been solved by Lieutenant-Governor Guild. They will ride through the city on elevated trains from the North station to the South station on their way to Providence, and the only parading they will do here will be to church on Sunday, when they would not carry arms any way.

But it looked for a time as if the trip would be given up, for no one could see any way of getting around our troublesome Massachusetts law, which forbade them bearing arms on march through city.

The Canadian visitors will arrive in two special trains at the North station early on the morning of August 5, embark immediately upon the trains of the Boston Elevated Road, arrive at the South station in season for the 8 o'clock train and run express to Providence, where the command of Colonel Rogers will spend the day as guests of the Fifth Rhode Island Regiment.

The Canadian visitors will return to BostonSaturday night, disembarking at the Back Bay station, from which they will walk across the bridge to the South armory, their headquarters.

On Sunday afternoon they will parade to church, without arms, headed by their own two bands. Their escort will be the British Naval and Army Veterans, with whom the officers of the 43d will subsequently dine.

On Monday the rank and file will be relieved from duty and spend the day as they please, largely under guidance of Boston friends. The regiment will leave the armory Monday evening and proceed to the North station by elevated railway service. The special trains will leave at 6:17 and 6:32 respectively.

GIRL AND TWO BOYS MISSING

Special to the Boston American.

WESTFIELD, Mass., July 28.—Anna Hicks, fifteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hicks, left home Tuesday afternoon, saying she was going to visit a friend. She has not been seen since and her whereabouts are unknown.

Clarence Soule and Anthony Herrick, two boys who had boarded with the Hicks family, also disappeared the same afternoon. The Soule boy had been on very friendly terms with Anna, but it is not known that they went away together.

Mrs. Hicks had occasion to reprimand young Soule the day before he disappeared. Both boys were known to have revolvers. The police are working on the case and a description of the girl has been sent to the large cities and towns in the vicinity.

Anna is described as rather stout, has dark hair, blue eyes and a round full face, very freckled. She wore a dark skirt, light waist, red coat and blue cap.

COLONEL COLE CLEARS STREET

Colonel Charles H. Cole, Jr., chairman of the Board of Police, had Boylston street cleared of the crowd of ragamuffins who nightly gather and fight for pennies and other coins thrown them by the crowd that gathers to hear them sing.

The chairman was attending a theatre, and between the acts came out to get a breath of air. He noticed a crowd blocking the street, and witnessed the scramble of the youngsters for the coins thrown them. He watched the proceedings for a few moments and then spied a policeman.

"You'd better clear the street," he remarked, quietly.

The policeman looked at him and then said, "Who are you?"

"I'm just Chairman of the Board of Police," remarked Colonel Cole, quietly.

The officer cleared the street.

HOT BURGLAR CHASE IN THE SUBURBS

Police in Patrol and on Car Pursue Escaping Man Three Miles and Arrest Him.

STOPPED BY REVOLVERS

One of the hottest daylight burglar chases that ever took place through the streets of Boston occurred in Hyde Park, Roslindale, Jamaica Plain and Forest Hills when a patrol wagon full of policemen and an officer in an electric car chased an alleged burglar galloping through the streets in a buggy, drawn by a powerful black horse.

The man was captured at the point of a revolver, held by Officer McAdams, after he had run his horse three miles in an effort to escape. He gave his name as Harry A. Collins, and lives at No. 23 Lynde street, West End, and is believed to be one of a gang of burglars who have been operating in the southern portion of Greater Boston.

The burglar chase began when Mary Curran, a maid employed by Edgar M. Runnells, of No. 50 Oak street, Hyde Park, entered the house and found a strange man descending the stairs. The stranger, jumping over the rail, grabbed her and put one hand over her mouth, at the same time shouting, "Come down here!"

A second man dashed down the stairs, and both, springing through the front door, jumped into a buggy and dashed up the street.

Pedler Gives Chase.

Frank H. Baker, a vegetable vendor, sprang upon his team and gave chase. Down Oak street into Hyde Park avenue the chase continued, until Baker, distanced, turned back and notified the Hyde Park police.

Nothing was missed from the house but a purse containing $2 and a small sunburst pin.

An alarm from Hyde Park was sent the Jamaica Plain station. A covered buggy drawn by a big black horse was said to contain two—it was learned later there were three—burglars, heading toward Forest Hills.

While Sergeant Rideout was at the telephone in the Roslindale sub-station receiving the message from Captain McBryan he saw a covered carriage, with a large black horse hitched to it, passing through Ashland street.

Patrolman George Richardson was sent after the carriage, which had gone toward South street. Richardson took an electric car for Forest Hills. Far down Washington street he could see the carriage. The motorman, urged by Richardson, put on the power and ran the car at a furious rate, everybody agog with excitement.

Captain McBryan soon had a posse of officers in the patrol wagon dashing down Green street to Washington street.

When the car reached Forest Hills square Patrolman Richardson saw the big black horse still whirling down Washington street toward Jamaica Plain. Soon, some distance down the street, Richardson saw the patrol wagon coming at full gallop. He pointed toward the horse and carriage, then going at top speed past them.

Quickly turning, Driver Brown whipped up his horses and gave chase. The one man in the much-wanted carriage now saw the point and laid his whip on the horse.

Stopped at Revolver Point.

Patrolman Richardson signaled to Patrolman McAdams, who had just come out on Green street onto Washington street, some 200 feet ahead of the galloping horse.

Great was the flying rider's surprise when the giant form of McAdams loomed up in the middle of the street, directly in the path of the galloping horse, his revolver aimed directly at his head. "Stop!" shouted the policeman, and the man stopped.

The captured man was taken to the station house, where, questioned by Capt. McBryan, he gave the name of Harry A. Collins, 23 years old, and claimed a residence at 23 Lynde street, West End.

He said he was employed as an electrician by the Boston & Northern street railroad. On him were found two pawn tickets dated June 6 and July 22, calling for an open-faced gold watch and a gold signet ring.

He denied there was any one in the carriage with him at any time that afternoon. But the police say he stopped at Forest Hills station to let his companions out.

Collins was taken to the Dudley-street station, where an effort will be made to connect him with a break in the house of Benjamin F. Kirby, 42 Monroe street.

BURGLAR LOCKS AGED WOMAN IN HER OWN HOME

She Interrupted Meal He Was Enjoying in Her Pantry, and Objected.

ROCKLAND, July 28.—Locked in a room of her residence, on North avenue, by a burglar whom she surprised in the act of ransacking the house, Mrs. Julia Carey, eighty years of age, was so frightened she collapsed, and is now in a dangerous condition.

The aged woman had been making a call on a neighbor, and there was no member of the family at home when she returned. Passing to an inner room, she was surprised to find a strange man in the pantry, who was coolly helping himself to the eatables. The fellow eyed Mrs. Carey with the utmost nonchalance and went on eating.

"What are you doing there?" she exclaimed.

"Oh, I was hungry," he replied with a laugh, "and your pies were so much like mother used to make that I couldn't resist the temptation to eat some of them."

Before the old lady could say anything more the intruder advanced from the pantry and as she retreated turned the key in the door of the room where she was standing, and thus made her a prisoner.

Mrs Carey screamed for help, and her cries soon brought the neighbors to her assistance.

The fellow had either carried off the key or concealed it, and they were compelled to break open the door to effect her release.

So far as could be discovered in the course of a hasty search, the fellow only succeeded in carry off some pieces of jewelry, Mrs. Carey's cries for assistance having evidently caused him to depart in a hurry. Many articles were strewn around the floors, and it was evident the burglar had made a thorough exploration of the house for valuables, and, not expecting any one to return immediately, had determined to make a leisurely meal.

The police discovered that some of the jewelry taken from the house had been pawned in the town and obtained a description of the man who had pawned it. His movements were traced with very little difficulty, and Chief of Police Snell and Officer Kendrigan soon had a man under arrest, who they claim is "Moonshine" Kelley, of East Weymouth. He is to be arraigned to-day.

GIRL RUNS AWAY AFTER QUARREL

Her feelings hurt by a quarrel with her brother, little Gladys E. Steele, 9 years old, of No. 395 Salem street, Maplewood, ran away from home and was found sitting on a doorstep in Pearl street early to-day by a patrolman from Court Square station. She was very sleepy, and held her dolly tightly in her arms.

At the station the child said she had come into Boston to meet her father. The Malden police were communicated with, and the child's mother, Mrs. Ada J. Steele, located. Mrs. Steele said Gladys had quarrelled with her brother, and being of a very sensitive nature, left the house. The mother thought she had gone to a neighbor's, and did not worry until late at night, when she did not return. The family had searched everywhere for the child.

MABEL PAGE'S FATHER DYING

Mr. Page has suffered two paralytic shocks, the second coming a week ago. His daughter, Mrs. Freeman of Marlboro street, Boston, and his son Harold, are attending him. Because of his extreme age and the great trouble he has had within the last two years there is little hope for his recovery.

WHAT IS A KISS WORTH?

$20, SAYS JUDGE ALMY; $50, SAYS JUDGE SISK

WHAT DO YOU SAY?

THIS talk about the value of a kiss has taken possession of the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN in great shape.

Everybody seems to have an opinion. Furthermore they are putting their opinions on paper and rushing them into the AMERICAN office.

Some of the writers—they appear to be women—think that no value can be placed upon a kiss. They declare it to be an impossibility to fix the price.

Others, with less sentiment probably, admire the courage of the judges who placed upon osculation two different prices.

Then again there are those who say, "Let the girls of Cambridge and Lynn settle the question; they ought to know."

Anyhow it is an interesting question. One can imagine the young man making a call and using it as a means of finding out just how he stands in the affections of the maiden. Probably she'll say she doesn't know, because she never was—she doesn't get a chance to finish, and if she were so inclined she might have that bold young man before Judge Almy or Judge Sisk.

The BOSTON AMERICAN is glad to get opinions on the subject, no matter how you stand.

Send in your sentiments.

What is the value of a kiss?

WHAT SOME READERS THINK ABOUT IT.

Girl an Accessory

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In the matter of a kiss, isn't a girl an accessory, and ought she not be fined too? How can a judge decide that a girl doesn't give a responsive pucker to her lips? If she decides afterward that she was foolish, or has a grudge against a fellow, what show has he got with a judge who taxes the kisser $20 or $50 and lets the recipient go free? MOSES LUTHER.

The Legal Side

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Being a constant reader of your paper, it is no more than natural that I should have noticed the discussion that is now running on the kissing question. Being a lawyer as well as a husband, I thought that I would give my views on the subject.

When Judge Almy and Judge Sisk fined the two men for kissing the women without their permission they looked at the question not from a sentimental, but from a legal standpoint, of course. A kiss given to a party without her consent is in law an assault upon another's person, and being such is punishable by a fine. In cases of assault the judge looks at the damage done in affixing the penalty, and in these cases no actual damage was done other than that to the women's pride, and the fine inflicted was certainly severe enough. enough. A New Definition

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Noah Webster, Chauncey Depew, Elijah Dowie and others define a kiss variously. No one seems to realize that one word defines it. The word is "ecstasy." I know nothing of kisses, save those between husband and wife. Such marks of affection should not be forgotten in the course of a discussion of kissing. As an interchange of affection, as a perpetuating mark of love, they are without price. The law may place a foolish figure on them, as it rates a man's life to be worth, legally, but a few thousand dollars, but the true kiss, the kiss worth having, is one of life's most valuable gifts. MRS. LUCILLE N. KING.

Kiss Not a Commodity

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

This question of the value of a kiss is largely a matter of economics. A kiss is certainly not a commodity—it cannot be sold over again and what one man might be willing to pay fifty dollars for another wouldn't accept at the rate of two cents a dozen. To my mind it is all a matter of reciprocity. Where there is no reciprocity there is no value. JOHN N. BOSQUEY.

Girls Like Kisses

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is a shame that some young women should have young men haled into court and fined for kissing. Why, there are lots of girls who would give the world to have a man—the right man—kiss them. It has been understood in all ages that a man worth kissing doesn't ask for a kiss, but just goes ahead and takes it. If men are to be fined for kissing, the money ought to be turned over to the girls they don't kiss. LIZZIE N. R.

A Question of Duty

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In the South they tell a story of the ugliest man on earth. He was so homely that horses used to shy at the sight of him. One day he saw his wife holding the cow by the horns and having a great struggle. "What on airth are you doin', Mandy?" he asked. "Josh," she said, "I've been thinkin' it's my duty to kiss you and I'm reconcilin' myself to the idee by practising on the cow." SIMON SUGGS.

Demands Imprisonment

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The discussion which is now running in your paper has interested me very much and I should like to give my views.

I think in affixing a penalty for one who dares to kiss a party without her consent the judge should not only look at the legal, but also at the moral side. If men are allowed to go about and kiss any women they see fit, secure in the knowledge that if arrested they will only have to pay a slight fine, I shudder to think of the women that will thus suffer. I think if the judge takes it upon himself to fix a pecuniary value to a kiss he should make it so high that instead of inviting the crime to continue it would instantly stop it all.

A mere fine is not enough—give the monster a jail imprisonment—and you very well know that if such a punishment is inflicted it will prove a very effective bar.

Jamaica Plain. MRS. C. M. Q.

Cheap at the Price

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

What seems to me the most remarkable thing about this agitation of the value of a kiss is the fact that Judge Sisk and Judge Almy should have had the courage to publicly announce their estimates. The man who was fined in Cambridge hasn't said what he thinks of the value at $20 per kiss, but the man in Lynn who was fined $50 for one says that it was worth it.

It would seem as though kisses were cheaper in Cambridge than in Lynn. Why not get some opinions from the fair maids of Cambridge as to what they think of the comparison. I'll guarantee that the value will be somewhat raised by the University City girls. From what I have seen of them I should say that even $50 would be very cheap for the privilege of stealing just one little tiny smack.

No doubt Lynn girls will want their limit raised. Better ask them about it. The decisions will be interesting beyond a doubt. DORCHESTER.

Kisser Not to Blame

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your paper states that a New York judge has ordered a man to kiss his wife and make up. It also relates that a Cambridge judge has placed a value of $20 on a kiss. I venture to suggest that kisses are too much neglected, save when there is opportunity to steal one. Only on rare occasions do kisses result in an appearance at court. A man is not to blame if, being without ties of family, he kisses as he may. It should not be forgotten, ever, that a kiss should be given freely. Snatched, it becomes an insult, and $20 is then too poor a balm for wounded feelings.

Boston. H. P. LORING.

A Kiss Without Price

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Regarding Judge Almy's decision as to the worth of kisses a number of people have written to your paper, but they seem to have ignored the fact that a kiss, under proper circumstances, is without price.

BACK BAY MAN UNDER ARREST

George F. Warnock, a well-known Back Bay clubman, has been arrested, charged with an attempt to defraud the management of the Hotel Touraine of $50.35, due it for room rent and accommodations between May 18 and 23 of this year. Warnock is the son of a well-known business man who died some time ago, and is heir to about $20,000.

"In a short time I will receive my share of my father's estate, and then will have about $20,000," said Warnock, after being taken to police headquarters. "I have been a little hard up of late, because of litigation of my father's estate, but a compromise has been effected and in a short time I will get my share. I had not the slightest intention of defrauding the Hotel Touraine. I simply did not have the money handy and had to wait until I could get it, of course, before I could pay."

Warnock was bailed by Secretary Davenport of the Metropolitan Water Board. He is married to the daughter of a prominent Beacon street man, and was well known some time ago as an athlete.

WINNER MUST PAY $225 FOR TROPHY

Because of the Dingley tariff schedule, Dr. E. F. Gleason, Boston's crack shot, must pay $225 for the privilege of bringing a prize he won in Canada into the United States, or else go without the prize, which is a piano valued at $500.

Under the tariff the doctor must pay seventy-five per cent. duty on the instrument. The piano was won by Dr. Gleason in a shooting match in Canada, where he represented the Boston Athletic Association's gun club. An appeal to the Treasury Department was of no avail.

How the Law Looks at Kissing

A kiss is, in legal effect, a battery; it is the unlawful touching of the person of another by the aggressor, if done without consent.

To constitute a battery the intent to injure must concur with the use of unlawful violence upon the person of the assaulted party, but the slightest degree of force suffices to constitute violence, and the intended injury may be only to the feelings and mind of the latter, as well as to the corporal person, and no real injury may be intended.

It has been held in numerous cases that to kiss a woman "without innocent reason or cause" is an assault and battery, and that is the law in practically every State in the United States.

Nervous Women

Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Uterine Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES

Mrs M.E. Shotwell

Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous?

How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly;" or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in women is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability. Spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps. Pain in the ovaries and between the shoulders. Loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia. A tendency to cry at the least provocation. All this points to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night.

"I had three doctors and got no better, and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has worked wonders for me.

"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone and my friends say I look ten years younger."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick and weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

The fans will shift from the South End grounds to those on Huntington avenue this afternoon, when they will welcome the return of the Champs from a complete Western trip. To add to the feature of the game, the first for over two weeks on the home lot, Cleveland, at present leader of the race, will be in opposition to Jimmy Collins's braves.

Last night the Champs arrived home. They came in on the 8:30 train from Albany, having left Detroit early Wednesday night. A better and more healthy looking lot of players never before stepped from a Pullman at the Huntington avenue station. Every man, although tired from the long journey, was ready to state that victories, they were sure, are due and coming from the Champs good and plenty from now on until October.

"It was the two double-headers in Cleveland that hurt us the most," said Captain Jimmy to a big crowd of admirers who were on hand to greet the Champs with the glad hand. "We hope, however, to even up matters with the Naps before they get away next week.

"We won eight and lost eight games on the Western trip, which from one point of view is not really so bad. We lost two to St. Louis which would have been ours if luck had broken right, while two of those Cleveland games, and perhaps three, were simply handed to them, owing to the failure of our pitchers to cover first when the baseman went after hits.

"Armbruster, the catcher we secured from New London, made a grand showing. He has a great arm and he seems to hit the ball hard every time he steps to the plate. He is the most willing worker I ever saw, and, like Criger and Ferris, wants to take part in every game. He says he would rather play ball than eat, and I guess that's about right.

"We have secured another catcher also since leaving Boston. His name is Owens. He hails from the Lyons club of the New York State League. Bill Dinneen stands good for Owens's getting a chance, as the manager of the Lyons club recommended him to Bill. He is said to be extra fine.

"We expect to hear from a couple of new outfielders in a day or two. Both have records as being exceedingly fine fielders, fast base runners, good hitters and strong throwers. That's all a fielder needs to be, with a little coco work added, of course."

When the fans return to the grounds this afternoon they will miss the pleasant face of Charley Farrell, the "Duke of Marlboro."

The veteran backstop has felt for some time that he did not wish to keep in the thick of the fray, and while the Champions were in the West arrangements were made for him to retire gracefully from the scene of operations, and he now is no longer a member of the Boston team.

Farrell has done some great work for the nine, and his head work for the past two seasons has been a great factor in the championships that have come Boston's way.

He has not been himself since he broke his leg two years ago, but this year he felt that he could get back into the game right, and it was only a little while ago that he saw that he had best retire.

This probably will mark Farrell's retirement, as last Winter he said that after this year he would not engage in any more active baseball.

Last Winter he had a chance to go out to California to manage a Pacific Coast league team, but decided to remain with the local Americans. Jesse Tannehill will probably pitch to-day, while "Ad" Joss may work for the Indians.

BIG ATHLETES IN N. E. CHAMP

W. W. Coe, the great shot putter, has left for Portland, Ore., where he is to take part in the National championships. After these he will return direct to Boston and will prepare for the New England championships, which take place at Combination Park, Medford, on August 12. If Coe wins in Portland he will try for a record put at the local championships, and will certainly have to hustle in both places to win, as he will be in against some very fine men.

Martin J. Sheridan of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, who also will compete in the A. A. U. championships in Portland, has entered for the New England championships, and when he comes here for them he will be accompanied by several other members of his club. In fact, the games at Combination Park, some of the events of which will be open, will be entered by the star men of the East, and should be the finest held in these parts in a long while.

CRACK TEAMS WILL CONTEST

With four of the best pace followers in the game in a big team race at the Revere track to-morrow night, one of the best races of the Summer season is on the card.

Jimmy Moran and Harry Caldwell will team it against Floyd McFarland, the Californian, and Louis Mettling in ten-mile heats.

The winners of the first heat will ride a ten-mile race, and the losers of the same heat will meet in a separate heat, and then will come the final, making forty miles of hot racing, and top speed will be maintained all the time, as any one of the quartette can reel off ten miles at an amazing clip.

It will be an excellent try-out of the riders and establish among them who stands ahead in the game.

Then there will be a mile handicap in which pros and amateurs will compete, and there will be no barring any rider on account of his standing.

FIELD DAY FOR FIREMEN

The firemen will hold a muster and field day at the Locust street grounds, South Boston, to-morrow afternoon. Besides an unusually large number of sports, there will be dancing. The events carded are:

Hand tub competition, 100-yard dash, 440-yard potato race, 880-yard relay race, three standing jumps, baseball games, whippet races and other competitions equally interesting.

CONN. LEAGUE RESULTS.

HOLLY-CROSBY BOUT WAS TAME

Special to the Boston American.

READING, Pa., July 28.—What was to have been the star feature of the bouts before the Eureka Athletic Club in the Bijou Theatre was a ten-round go between Dave Holly of Philadelphia and Steve Crosby of Louisville. It, however, developed into a series of clinches and amateur actions that called forth cries of fake from the large crowd of spectators.

N. Y. RIFLEMEN WON.

CREEDMOOR, L. I., July 28.—New York retained the McAlpin trophy by the excellent shooting of its State team. The New York riflemen scored 968 out of a possible 1,200. The United States Marine Corps team, from the Washington, D. C., barracks, was second with 917, and the New Jersey team third, with 914.

GOTCH MAY SOON MEET MARVIN HART

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Frank Gotch, if he makes good his threat to break into the fighting game for keeps, will probably be the next man to face Marvin Hart, who just at present is stumbling around in an old pair of shoes once the property of Jim Jeffries. When Gotch was wrestling around New York a few months ago he said that he would have a try at anyone Jeff handed the title over to, and he is keeping after the Louisville man now and begging for a battle.

Hart, the champion of Louisville, arrived in that city the other night after spending several days at Alexandria, Ky., with his brother. Alexandria is different from Louisville in that it shows appreciation of what has been accomplished in the boxing world by the Louisvillian. He was met at the depot by a brass band, consisting of thirty-seven pieces, and was featured during the entire time he was at his brother's home, the glad hand of welcome being extended on all sides.

Hart has decided to call off the Chicago theatrical engagement. He is feeling none too well at the present time, and with the intensely hot weather which prevails in the Western metropolis at this time he decided it was best to remain quietly at his country home near Louisville for the balance of the Summer. In the Fall he will probably accept one of the several offers which are standing open to him in the theatrical world and go out to make some of the easy money on which his contemporaries have enjoyed themselves so well in the past.

He acknowledges having received several challenges from Gotch and said that he had wired back his acceptance thereof, with the understanding that Gotch was to live up to the bluff he had made that he was willing to bet $5,000 on the side that he could whip the "champion." Hart is willing to take on any man with a reputation, and if Gotch has more money than he can use just now he is willing to give him a chance for the championship title providing they can get a club in the West to handle the fight.

RICH PRIZES AT CAPE MAY RACES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Owners and drivers of racing automobiles are presented a splendid opportunity to compete for valuable trophies at Cape May, N. J., this Summer. The Cape May Automobile Club, under whose auspices the racing and speed tests will be conducted, is offering for competition two cups of the aggregate guaranteed value of $1,000, and the second, known as the Cape May Kilometer Cup, is of the guaranteed value of $500. The Cape May trophy is for the mile, while the second cup is for the lesser distance, as its name implies. Both are splendid examples of the silversmith's art, and the victor will be well repaid in the possession of either or both for the efforts made to gain supremacy.

The conditions under which the cups are offered are similar. Starting to-morrow, the club will conduct a series of speed trials and racing meets over the straightaway beach course, and the maker of the best time of the season at both distances will win the cup outright. The number of attempts for the cups is entirely optional. At all officially sanctioned meets the timing apparatus of Mr. A. L. Murtry will be used, and the season's best times will be the winning marks for the cups.

Mr. Walter Christie will set the ball a-rolling in the competition for both cups to-morrow. He will go for the world's record at both the mile and kilometer distances, and whether successful in either attempt, his figures will set a mark for the beach and for the trophies. The inaugural speed trials were originally arranged for Saturday last, but inclement weather forced a postponement for a week.

Aside from the record-making by Mr. Christie the club has arranged for seven regular events, to be run off on the mile course. Amateurs in all makes of cars, classified as to horse-power, will compete for silver cups, while chauffeur and professional drivers will have plenty of opportunity to display their talents in handling their employers' cars.

NEW PLAYERS FOR BOSTON CHAMPS

President Taylor of the Boston American League ball club has completed deals for two ball players who will join the Champs at the close of the season in the leagues they are now playing in.

The first is Pitcher Harris of Fall Rievr. He is a Melrose lad, and has been making good for the Fall River team in great style. As soon as the New England League season ends he will report to Captain Jimmy Collins.

The other new recruit is Catcher Peterson, who is now playing for Billy Hamilton in the Tri-state League. He jumped the Fall River team, and is now playing independent ball. Mr. Taylor has secured Fall River's interest in the player, and he will become a member of the Boston team when the Tri-state season ends, if proper terms can be made with him.

BEST HORSES AT READVILLE

READVILLE, July 28.—Sweet Marie, 2:04¾, arrived at the track at 9 a. m. with the stable of horses, in which Alta McDonald will start at the meeting next week.

Tiverton in John Howell's stable walked into the track a few hours later. He looks fine and strong. Both horses will have a workout in the morning.

NEW YORK Y. C. BOATS TO RACE FOR $1,000 CUP

NEW YORK, July 28.—Big times are in sight for the yachtsmen of the New York Yacht Club. Great preparations are being made for the annual cruise, and the boats will assemble Thursday, August 10, at Glen Cove, when the Rendezvous Cups will be sailed for over the regular courses. The races will be open to all regular and special classes.

The yachts will be classified in three divisions as far as the courses are concerned, the first division, A, to include all classes from A to J; the second division, B, classes K, L and M, and the third division, C, the one-design classes and all classes too small for enrollment.

The warning signal will be hoisted at 11 o'clock. Five minutes later the preparatory signal will be given, and at intervals of five minutes the classes will be sent away.

Rear Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt has offered a special $1,000 cup for the winning yacht of the New York Yacht Club one-design class.

The first run of the fleet will take place Friday, August 11, from Glen Cove to Morris Cove, off New Haven, Ct., a distance of 39½ miles. On Saturday, August 12, the run will be from Morris Cove to New London, thirty-nine miles.

MURPHY WILL MEET ATTELL IN PRIVATE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Harry Pollok says that a match in private has been arranged between Abe Attell and Tommy Murphy of Harlem. The go, according to Pollok, is to be decided within a month's time, and will be for twenty rounds. In order to make the mill as exclusive as possible, fancy prices will be charged to see it, and the attendance will be limited. Attell and Murphy are undoubtedly the cleverest little fellows before the public to-day. They have been trying to get together for some time. A good deal of importance is attached to this bout, for the reason that both men are after the featherweight title. The weight will be 122 pounds ringside.

LYNN ASSOCIATION BEATEN.

ORANGE, July 28.—The Philadelphia Giants defeated the Lynn Association, 10 to 2. Lynn could not hit Foster, while the Giants did some terrific batting, many of Lynn's infield errors being excusable. No regular umpire being in attendance, Abbott and Thomas did the honors, Abbott's work making some trouble.

NARRAGANSETT HANDICAPS.

The following handicaps of to-day's races at Narragansett Park were made for the BOSTON AMERICAN by one of the most skillful handicappers on the American turf. He has been following the races at New York for fifteen years, and is thoroughly familiar with the form of every horse entered to-day. These handicaps will appear every racing day throughout the meeting.

Special to the Boston American.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, July 28.—There are few features to the card to-day, but every race has filled well and the fields are closely matched, so the sport should be entertaining. The fourth race should furnish the most interest, but there are some speedy ones in the second affair, which might set a new mark for the track if the going remains fast.

Sunglow should romp home in the opening event if he runs his race, but he is not consistent and his bad races are more frequent than his good ones.

Preen has the foot of the field in the second unless Rosetint has quite recovered from the kick she received last time out. She is very fast and is sure to put up the fight and can be depended upon to run a thoroughly game race.

Ambitious looks best in the third, with Programme a possibility.

Lord Badge might run one of his good races in the fourth, and if he does, with only 99 pounds up, the others will never catch him. Little Scout is better in heavy going, but he has been showing form, so should go well. Cloverland should be able to hold the others safe.

Changeable is another useful one from the Walden barn, and the two-year-olds of this stable are worth remembering. She should win the last race from Ava.

But two pegs from the bottom of the ladder the Boston National League baseball squad left the Hub last night for St. Louis, where they open up to-morrow.

Although beaten three out of four by the Pirates, the Walpole street aggregation are not the least discouraged and feel confident that by the time they return to the South End grounds they will be at least two positions higher up in the standing.

Luck has been against them frightfully of late, as they have been playing excellent ball with the exception of a single inning in each game for the past seven or eight played here. With an equal break from Dame Fortune, Captain Tenney and his braves say they will win surely half of the games played on this trip.

Yesterday's game was a rattling one. It was won on errors by the outfield and inability by the local swatsmen to connect with Schoolmaster Leever's assortment of benders and twisters.

VONDERHORST, MAGNATE, DEAD

NEW YORK, July 28.—Harry Vonderhorst, secretary and part owner of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, died at his home in Brooklyn at 1:40 o'clock this morning from heart failure. Mr. Vonderhorst has not been in good health for some time.

Mr. Vonderhorst was born in Baltimore fifty-five years ago and was owner of the famous Baltimore team which won the championship of the National League several years in succession. The team was subsequently transferred to Brooklyn.

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF LOVE By Dorothy Dix

The Ninth Commandment of Love Is This:

Thou Shalt Not Let a Stranger Intermeddle with Love

FIRST	Thou shalt have no other love but me.
SECOND	Trust me all in all or not at all.
THIRD	Thou shalt not dull me with satiety.
FOURTH	Wound me not with cruel words.
FIFTH	Thou shalt not bind me with fetters.
SIXTH	Guard me as the jewel of thy soul, for, once lost, I can never be regained.
SEVENTH	Thou shalt not mistake thy fancies for me.
EIGHTH	Strip not the halo of romance from about me.

The Individual Who Is Going to Marry Has the Right of Choice

By Dorothy Dix

LOVE is a riddle to which two people have the key, while the third individual is left hopelessly guessing. Nobody ever understands why anyone falls in love with anyone else. The only match that has ever taken place since the world began that outsiders could account for was that of Adam and Eve.

We can comprehend why the only man and the only woman married each other, but when we hear of the betrothal of our friends our first exclamation is:

"Gracious! What do you suppose induced him to pick out her?"

And our next is:

"What on earth could she see in him?"

In this wise do we express our inability to feel the attraction, physical and psychic, that draws two people together, and the admission that we do not understand the why and the wherefore of love ought to warn us that we have no business intermeddling with it.

Parents Are Mistaken

IT doesn't, however. There probably isn't a single individual living who doesn't consider himself, or herself, perfectly capable of picking out husbands and wives for everybody in the community, and we all have a secret feeling, whenever we hear of a marriage that has turned out badly, that it is the result of people following their own inclinations, instead of having asked our advice.

Assuredly there are no parents who do not feel themselves qualified to settle their children's love affairs.

Every mother in the land feels that she could guarantee her son's happiness by marrying him off to that nice, domestic, pious Mary Smith next door, who has a comfortable fortune in her own right, and a pug nose and carroty hair.

Every father is sure that it would be for his daughter's welfare if he could only induce her to look with favor upon the addresses of the sensible and substantial gentleman around the corner, and who has a good home and a good income to offer her.

The mother would, if she could, break off the engagement between her son and the pretty and gay and impecunious young girl whom he has chosen for a wife.

The father considers that he is doing nothing more than his duty in throwing obstacles in the way of his daughter pledging herself to a youth who has still his fortune to make, and neither parent is ever troubled by the slightest suspicion that the girl and the boy whose lives they are doing their conscientious best to wreck are the only possible judges of what they want in a husband or wife.

No Rule for Love

THERE is no such other mystery as the mystery of love.

Science can measure the distance to the sun and determine the course of the stars, but it cannot tell where one's love will fall. Philosophy has formed codes of ethics and systems of religion for man to live by and die by, but it has not formulated any law by which he can be happy and successful in love.

Experience has taught humanity wisdom in everything but love. Before that the sage and the fool, the adept and the amateur, the debutante and the valetudinarian stand upon the same platform.

Nobody is capable of judging of who is another's affinity, or with whom they will be happy. We do not know ourselves why we love. We only know that out of all the world some one who has not more beauty, more worth, more charm or more intelligence than a million others is the only possible one for us.

We cannot settle the question by reason ourselves.

Still less can another settle it for us, for we are swayed in our choice by the double current of mental and physical attraction, and somewhere across the placid tide of intellectual congeniality there breaks the warm gulf stream of passion that sweeps us capriciously and helplessly away from one man or woman to another.

Love Rules Supreme

NONE of us would pick out a dull husband for a brilliant woman, or a simple and ignorant wife for a learned man, or a gay little butterfly for a preacher, or a grave scientist for a society belle, or a girl cigarmaker for a millionaire; but these people select each other for mates against the protest of their friends, and are happy ever after, because each answers to the other for some need of the heart that no stranger could possibly know.

In matters of the affection love is supreme, and a man or woman should take counsel of nothing but his or her own soul. Family and friends have no right to dictate on the subject.

Because a girl does not fire your mother's fancy is no sign that you will not love her forever and a day. Because a man does not cause your father's heart to go pit-a-pat is no reason that he will not thrill you as long as you live.

The individual who is going to marry has the right of choice, and this is a fact that families who intermeddle in love affairs would do well to remember.

The danger to love from the interference of outsiders does not end with the wedding. Indeed, the time when love needs most guarding comes after marriage, particularly in those cases where a couple are so unfortunate as to have to live in the house with relatives who feel free to point out the faults and shortcomings of husband to wife, and wife to husband.

The mother-in-law question is supposed to be a figment of the humorist's brain, but it is a solemn divorce fact. Statistics show that there are very few unhappy marriages in which family interference does not play an important part, and so to the married above the single is commended this ninth commandment:

THOU SHALT NOT LET A STRANGER INTERMEDDLE WITH LOVE.

Common Sense Rules for Care of Babies

By Ida Badanes, M. D.

Five Vital Rules for Baby's Health

1—Keep the baby and everything belonging to it clean.
2—Keep it cool.
3—Do not tease it.
4—Keep it comfortable, even at the expense of "style."
5—Do not overfeed it.

PEOPLE are apt to go to extremes in the ways and means of bringing up their children, as they do in many things in this world, with like results—failure.

Some will marry and fuss so much over their babies that instead of well-meant good, they do positive harm by annoying and underfeeding their little ones. This class of women will follow all sorts of fads and theories about training the baby. They will weigh and measure trifles with great accuracy and will clothe the child, bathe and put it to sleep according to some well-advertised modern method.

While thus spending time and energy trying to make a machine of the body the most important points concerning its health and comfort very often are overlooked. These mothers should remember that babies have idiosyncrasies and that there are exceptions to the general rule.

Another class of mothers will go to an extreme by leaving the baby to nature or chance on the supposition that it will get hardened. Thus, mothers become negligent and learn, too late, that a mistake has been made.

Poor Not Healthiest

People entertain an erroneous idea about the strong children of poor, ignorant parents, imagining that those children are robust because of lack of care and because they are left to themselves to grow up like so many little animals.

It is true that we find many healthy, strong children among the poor, but it is really only the survival of the fittest. We do not know how many die before one is reared or how many remain invalids for life. If not actually maimed they may remain feeble, nervous or undersized.

A baby is like a delicate flower. It is to be tended with the utmost care if we want it to live and grow. We must protect it from extremes of temperature, give it enough sun, keep away parasites, water it when it is dry, etc.

The baby is the miniature man. It has its inclinations, wants and desires which are to be respected and complied with. Do not make the mistake of thinking that babies are here for the amusement of the grown-up people.

Did you ever notice how some will unceremoniously begin to pinch and tickle a baby? They will throw it up in the air, whirl it, swing it and do all sorts of odd things.

No Joke for the Baby

They may not stop for a moment to consider that perhaps some of these fantastic capers may be unpleasant to the infant.

If the baby cries before the performance is over the amused spectators are surprised at its not enjoying the fun. I have noticed, more than once, that these little mites want an introduction to a stranger. They want to get acquainted, get used to their pretended friend before they are ready to throw themselves into that one's arms. Baby gets offended and frightened when a stranger snatches it and begins to dance and hop about.

The nervous system of a baby is not firm and gets upset easily. That is why convulsions are so common an occurrence among children. We must, therefore, try to keep the little one as quiet and free from irritation as possible.

In hot weather it is advisable to let baby have its own way. The "character forming" and chastising should be postponed until the Fall. Teasing to make it laugh or cry should be avoided, as well as tossing up in violent jerks—a common way of "amusing"—and squeezing it and pressing to one's self makes it too weary.

Some Common Sense Rules

In order to be successful in bridging over the Summer months and come out triumphant on the other side with a healthy infant in her arms each mother should remember the few rules that follow:

1. Keep the baby and everything belonging to it clean.
2. Keep it cool.
3. Do not tease it.
4. Keep it comfortable, even at the expense of "style."
5. Do not overfeed it.

The greatest enemy of babies in the hot Summer months is a combination of diarrhoea and vomiting—Summer complaint or cholera infantum. It carries off more of them than any other disease.

This sickness may happen, in exceptional cases, under the best of care, but it especially comes through dirt, negligence and lack of fresh air. Mothers don't realize how essential cleanliness is in saving a baby's life, else some of them would find it easy to keep their offspring clean. It is not the outside, starched, stylish clothes that keep the baby clean. It is the child itself and the garments next to its body. All the clothing should be simple, light and clean. In extremely hot weather a thin-ribbed shirt and diaper are all the clothes baby needs in the house, with a cambric slip over it for outdoors.

For a ride to the seashore a thin flannel petticoat and thin cotton stockings and shoes may be added.

Starched Clothing Bad

No starched bonnets or starched dresses. The shoes and stockings can be dispensed with if the baby is at all used to getting along without them. If it is a bottle baby the bottles should be washed cleanly, then boiled and stopped up with cotton until used. The rubber nipples should be washed and kept in a solution of borax. The baby's mouth ought to be washed once a day at least with a solution of borax. The milk should be boiled if it be impossible to sterilize it in the right way. No diaper should be used more than once and should be washed, boiled and dried before being used again.

A nice time to take the baby out is between 5 o'clock in the morning and 9. Then take it indoors, bathe it, feed it and put it to sleep in the largest, coolest, airiest room in the house.

I would make such room the bedroom for the Summer, having the floor bare. If there be any shade in the yard or near the house, or a shady park in the vicinity, it is well to keep the baby out most of the time, keeping it indoors during the hottest part of the day.

In case the child looks very warm sponge it with tepid water two or three times a day. Give it enough cold boiled water to drink.

Do not experiment with new foods in the Summer time. If the baby gets along tolerably well leave it alone. Some mothers will insist on giving all sorts of indigestible things to infants in spite of warnings. They will, for instance, give potatoes to a ten-months-old child—something decidedly dangerous—and will wonder why their baby gets so sick.

What is the use of risking, since it doesn't do much good and the evil it may bring is awful? It may start up a diarrhoea to last the whole Summer, or may terminate in death in a few days.

If the baby gets sick call a doctor at once, and one in whom you have such confidence that you will obey his orders and not heed some kind neighbor who has "seen lots of sickness" and offers suggestions contrary to the physician's instructions.

Such neighbors are dangerous, because they interfere with the right treatment and cause prolonging of the disease.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl eighteen and I am lame. Dear Miss Fairfax, will you give me your advice? All my young men friends like me, and yet do not take me out. Is it because I am lame, or what is it? One fellow I am very fond of and he likes me. He comes and sees me once in a while, but never takes me out. Kindly help me, as it is very hard to be lame. ANXIOUS.

INDEED it must be hard, my poor little friend. Cheer up and be as happy and bright as you can, and you will find that people will seek you in spite of your infirmity. And, dear, if you cannot have attention from men, remember that there are many other good things on earth. Make yourself popular by being bright and sweet and unselfish. Don't fret, little girl; things may go all right.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man and have known a young girl for a good many years. Now she is as sweet a girl at times as anyone would care to meet. But it seems at times she acts so peculiar and is so indifferent that it makes me feel bad.

When I am alone in her company she is so different. I imagine she acts the way she does to try and make me angry. Can you advise me how I can change her? She claims I am the only fellow she really cares for. H. C. D.

SHE probably shows her true feelings when alone with you. At the same time if I were you I would tell her that her treatment of you in public hurts you. If she loves you as much as she professes to she will change her ways. If she will not you will have to take the bitter with the sweet or give her up.

SCARLET LIES

CHAPTER CXXXVI.

Spirit or Mortal—Which?

ONE glance at the face of Mary Armstrong told Fergus Braine what to expect. He adjusted and regulated his manner and speech accordingly. Instead of the bland smile and the unctuous mode of expression, he adopted a very severe, not to say stern, attitude, bowed coldly, almost defiantly, and waited for the girl to address him before venturing a remark himself. In this he was wise.

Mary glanced from Fergus Braine to Judith Mort. She obviously had expected to find her mother there in the place of Judith.

"Where is my mother?" she asked frigidly.

"She has just gone, Miss Armstrong," replied Braine, and looked meaningly at Judith, who took his hint and moved toward the door.

"Don't go," said Mary imperiously. Then she turned to Fergus Braine. "What do you want?" she asked defiantly.

"I am sorry to trouble you, Miss Armstrong," said Braine, still maintaining a very cold and stern demeanor; "but it is a matter of considerable importance to us both. I am sure it will be better if we discuss that matter alone."

"Yes, dear," put in Judith, "I think I'll go, if you don't mind. I have already cut one dance, and I really cannot reconcile myself to Losing Another."

Mary did not happen to notice her. She was looking inquiringly at Fergus Braine. A hideous fear was beginning to creep into her heart—a fear that something bad happened to her father—perhaps, who knew?—that the worst had happened.

Judith Mort did not wait to say any more. She left the beautiful boudoir cabin of Mrs. Elizabeth Armstrong and the two alone.

"Well?" said Mary, frigidly, looking Fergus Braine full in the face—a look of defiant challenge, before which his little agate eyes fell abashed despite himself.

"Miss Armstrong," said Braine, after a brief pause, "I came all the way from Boston to see your father——"

"You have wasted your valuable time," she said, with thinly veiled sarcasm.

"Not altogether," he retorted. "I have seen you."

"What do you want?" she asked sharply. "Why have you come? My father left this morning for England."

"One of the reasons I came," he said, "was to do my best to prevent his returning to America so soon."

"Indeed. You are very good." Her beautiful lips curled in fine scorn.

"Please be serious," he said sternly. "We are, if you believe me, discussing a matter of vital importance—a matter, one might almost say

Of Life and Death."

"I have no desire to discuss any matter with you, Mr. Braine," she said, with infinite reserve. "No possible good can come from it; besides, as you see, I am very busy."

"Not too busy, dear Miss Armstrong," said Fergus Braine, "to grudge a few minutes to save your father from ruin."

"I refuse to discuss the matter with you," she said. "You will find my father at his office. I cannot go into affairs which concern him."

"But they concern you also—and your mother."

"It is the same thing," she answered coldly. "Forgive me, but I am afraid I must go. I have many calls upon my time to-night."

Fergus Braine's eyes glittered maliciously.

"Such as the cowled monk, I suppose?" he said, in a voice that barely rose above a whisper.

The girl started.

"What do you mean?" she asked quickly.

"Who is the cowled monk?" Braine laughed beneath his breath, and observed that the girl looked puzzled and a little frightened. "Talbot, I believe, is the name he takes."

"Mr. Talbot is here," she answered, with an obvious effort. "Do you wish to see him?"

"Very much; but I fancy it would be very difficult. By the way, Miss Armstrong, did Mr. Talbot, the cowled monk, remind you forcibly of any one in particular? Come, now, be honest. Did you observe anything reminiscent about him?"

"I—I do not understand," she faltered.

Braine smiled.

"You have answered my question, though not in words," he said. "He reminded you of—or some one who is dead—eh?"

The girl bent forward impulsively.

"What do you mean?" she asked.

Braine shrugged his spare shoulders.

"I wonder," he said, "whether it has ever struck you that—that it is quite within the bounds of ordinary reasoning and assumption that Stephen Holland may still be alive?"

"Alive!"

breathed Mary, with a sudden catch in her voice. "But Stephen is dead!"

"Are you forgetting, young lady, that they have never yet found his body?"

"Oh, don't—don't!" she pleaded: and her eyes glistened with tears. "You are cruel!"

"After all," said Fergus Braine, "we have no actual proof of his death."

"But what does all this mean?" she asked.

Braine's stern demeanor suddenly changed. He smiled blandly.

"Tell me," he said, "did the monk remind you of him?"

"Yes," she faltered. "Terribly—awful!"

"Good. That is all I want to know. Did you see his face?"

"No."

"But you heard his voice, and——"

"Oh, what does it all mean?" she interrupted excitedly; but Fergus Braine ignored the interruption and went on heedlessly.

"Who is Mr. Talbot?" he asked.

"I don't know."

"You don't know—eh? Does any one know?"

"He is a friend of father's," she said.

"Humph! By the way, do you think it possible that I could see him now?"

"I dare say. But what has all this got to do with what you wanted to see me about?"

"A good deal," replied Fergus Braine, "as you will see in a very short time. I wonder if you would help me?"

"To Do What?"

"To see this Mr. Talbot," answered Braine.

"You can see him, of course," said Mary. "What is there to prevent you? He is here."

"But is he? That is the question. I very much doubt if he is here. You say Mr. Talbot is a friend of your father's?"

"So I understand," she answered, a little vaguely.

"But surely you must know, or somebody must know?"

"There are a lot of strangers here," she said. "One does not necessarily know all one's guests."

"Oh! But surely Mrs. Armstrong knows the mysterious monk?"

"Nobody knows any one to-night," she answered. "That is the whole thing. We are all incognito."

"It seems a somewhat risky proceeding. But will you allow me to try and find this Mr. Talbot?"

"Certainly, if you wish to; but is this all you wanted to say to me?"

"No; but it has just struck me as being even more important than that which brought me from Boston to Marseilles to see your father."

Mary regarded him with undisguised amazement. The man had always been an enigma to her; but he had never appeared to be such an incomprehensible mystery as he did then.

There was, however, something magnetic about his personality, something masterful and compelling.

She had, despite her avowed dislike and undisguised antagonism, experienced the same feeling before. She felt that she hated him, and yet at the same time she could not help admiring him. She feared him vaguely, while at the same time she had something within her that told her that he was in a great crisis or emergency.

Fergus Braine was very excited, though he succeeded admirably in hiding the fact from Mary Armstrong. A stupendous idea had occurred to him—an idea which put every other thought, great or small, trivial or important, from his mind.

Several times during the last few weeks the same idea had presented itself to him, but he had always rejected it, and refused to argue it out within himself, because he had had nothing tangible upon which to go, but here, with startling suddenness and unexpectedness, a seemingly incontrovertible piece of evidence in support of his idea had appeared. No wonder, then, that all thought of Darch and his schemes were swept from his mind, and the one and only thing remaining was the desire to solve the mystery of the cowled monk.

"When can I see you again?" asked Fergus Braine.

"There is surely no need for you to see me again?" answered Mary coldly. "Why not tell me anything you had to tell me now?"

"Because," frankly answered Fergus Braine, "I am so much interested in the monk. May I go in search of him?"

"Certainly."

"A thousand thanks. Meantime, dear young lady, let me assure you for your own peace of mind that you need have no fear concerning your father. I am acting in his interests, and I think there is no doubt but that I shall be able to satisfactorily

Arrange Matters."

"It has nothing to do with me," she replied distantly; "and personally, I prefer not to talk to my father's affairs with you."

"As you will, Miss Armstrong," he replied, a little absent-mindedly. "But now let me go and find our friend the cowled monk, who in voice so resembles the late Stephen Holland, or whatever you like to call him."

"I prefer to call him Stephen Holland," said Mary frigidly. "He was born and educated in the firm belief that he was the son and heir of a great man. I quite appreciated the ignominy of his position. I could well sympathise with him; but why should we discuss a matter upon which there is not the slightest possible chance of our ever agreeing? Go and find Mr. Talbot, if you want to, and, for myself, I prefer you not to look for me."

He found, however, that it was no easy matter to trace even so conspicuous a figure as the monk in such a crowd as was on the Seafoam that night.

He found Muller at last and briefly described the person he sought.

"I know who you mean, m'sieu," said Muller. "He left the yacht a quarter of an hour ago."

"Confound it!" exclaimed Braine. "That is just my luck. Did you see him go?"

"Yes, m'sieu."

"Do you know where he went?"

"No, m'sieu—that is, not after he left in one of the launches."

"Which took him ashore—do you know?"

"Certainly, m'sieu," answered Muller.

The August Number of the COSMOPOLITAN

Is Now On the News Stands

That is, most all dealers still have it, though in some cases the stocks have disappeared owing to the very spirited selling since Saturday morning.

As one agent put it, he "inadvertently sold out."

It's an exceptionally good number—deserves the high favor it has gained. Better than the number which preceded it, but NOT as good as those which will follow.

The Cosmopolitan is the sort of magazine every American family should buy REGULARLY. It's clean and cheerful, interesting and instructive—AN IDEAL AMERICAN HOME MAGAZINE.

Better start with the August number. It's full of features you will enjoy—the "Story of Paul Jones" among them. No succeeding Cosmopolitan will be less attractive—no other magazine will ever be more attractive, either in appearance or contents.

Common Sense on Babies

We Print Elsewhere an Article That Every Mother and Father of Babies Ought to Read

On another page in this issue you will find an article headed "Common Sense About Babies." Read it with care if you have got a baby, or ever expect to have one, or to be interested in one.

We want to emphasize briefly some of the excellent points made by Dr. Ida Badanes, who writes the article.

A baby is not created to amuse its parents, or to gratify their vanity. It is made to sleep and eat and breathe and grow, and develop into a decent human being.

It is not meant to be tickled, or tossed up in the air, or squeezed, or tired out with well-meant, asinine attentions.

Every baby has a CHARACTER of its own, a character as distinct as that of any grown person.

RESPECT THAT CHARACTER. Let it develop.

Remember that the most foolish thing you can do is to try to force a child to be exactly like yourself. Nature, striving for variety, makes the children unlike the parents. Don't let your vanity try to twist the child into a feeble copy of yourself. Hope, for the child's sake, that it will be very much better than you are.

Sleep, cleanliness, good food and pure air—freedom from excessive heat or cold, and freedom from the foolish teasing and bothering of grown people—these are the principal things for a baby.

This baby article that we print elsewhere is entitled to the most careful and respectful attention of every parent, because it is written BY A GOOD MOTHER.

Dr. Badanes, who writes the article, is not theorizing.

She is a woman of character, ambition and learning, who passed her examinations and took her degree as a doctor. She has practiced medicine in New York City.

But when her child was born, not long ago, she dropped the practice of medicine and everything else, realizing that she had had sent to her, in the person of that baby, the most important work that a woman can attend to.

She moved out into the country, taking her baby with her, that it might have the best possible chance.

This newspaper, hearing of the circumstances, decided that an individual combining the knowledge and training of a physician with the genuine instincts of motherhood, which this woman displays, ought to write well about babies.

Consequently we asked Dr. Badanes to write occasionally about babies for the mothers that read the BOSTON AMERICAN. To-day's article is the first of the series. We hope that there may be others.

We like especially the suggestion that the baby should be taken out to get the cool morning air from 5 to 9 a. m.

In this suggestion, made in the most matter of fact way, there is a mighty interesting rebuke, and one that ought to do good to a great many mothers.

Of course, the millions of mothers that must cook and scrub, take care of a husband and several other children, can't very well get out at 5 o'clock in the morning with the baby.

But how about the rich mothers that have nothing else to do, and that leave their children to the care of an indifferent nurse, indifferently watched?

You will find in the United States 500,000 rich women who will stay up until 5 in the morning to amuse themselves foolishly, where you won't find 500 that would get up at 5 in the morning to give their baby the benefit of the best three hours of the day.

The usual custom is to smother the noise and energy of the children at that hour in the morning, that the older and lazier people may sleep undisturbed.

We are going to print careful, well-thought-out articles about babies and their care more and more often in this newspaper.

The United States Government is constantly sending out instructions about caring for young pigs, killing grasshoppers, etc.

There are lots of sporting papers that give instructions about breeding puppies with short tails or long ears.

There are racing organizations that tell the world how to get the highest possible speed out of a baby horse, and break it down in the process.

We propose to have our yellow newspapers pay some attention to the human young one.

We complain enough about the foolishness and incompetency of the grown man of to-day, as you may have observed. The least we can do is to make suggestions that may cause a better tribe of men in the future.

CHICAGO AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Why Some Newspapers Are Critical

It must be perfectly apparent to any newspaper reader of intelligence that the newspapers controlled by corporation influences, and which, for that reason, oppose municipal ownership of public utilities, are making a systematic effort to depreciate the lesson of the last Chicago election and to hamper Mayor Dunne in his every effort to secure the street railways for the people.

Just at present this policy of the trust-ridden newspapers is chiefly manifested by their editorials on the report of James Dalrymple.

Dalrymple, it will be remembered, is the manager of the municipal street railways of Glasgow. He was invited by Mayor Dunne to come to Chicago and examine into the situation there. His report is in the Mayor's hands, but has not yet been made public.

But other utterances of his, some made to American newspaper correspondents and some published in a London trades paper, show that he views the situation in Chicago with some doubt.

It is foolish to think that the opinion of the Glasgow man, even had it been utterly hostile to municipal ownership in Chicago, would be conclusive or even important.

He found, as he says in his own statement, the street railway lines, after some sixty years of private ownership, utterly execrable.

But, he furthermore observed that the political situation in Chicago, largely the creation of the eminent Mr. Carter Harrison, lately Mayor, who, by the way, never believed in municipal ownership, does not promise efficient and economical management of the lines after they shall be acquired by the city.

He thinks that a change in the political system is necessary before the city can run its own street railroad.

This is held by the corporation newspapers of the United States as a fatal blow to municipal ownership. As a matter of fact, it is what every advocate of municipal ownership in this country, including Mayor Dunne himself, has said.

Civil service reform, or at any rate the elimination of purely political control of workers, is desirable and essential to the continued successful operation of a publicly owned gas company or street railroad company.

But it is not essential to the beginning of such a service on the part of city authorities. The service, once in operation, would be so essential to the convenience and comfort of the people that they would insist on the highest efficiency on the part of its officers and employes.

Time was that the United States Postoffice was a great political machine. It is one no longer, because it is necessary to the people that it should be a business-like institution.

The fire departments of our great cities were once cogs in the political mechanism. They are now wholly free from politics.

These are examples of publicly owned and managed institutions. But the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, the Boston Elevated Railway, the Chicago Gas Trust, are all run for the profit of their managers and the occasional, incidental profit of their stockholders.

AND EACH ONE OF THESE IS "IN POLITICS," AS THE PHRASE GOES, UP TO THE NECK.

The Parrot Made a Hit, but Our Rhyming Friend Got Bit

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Commends Charities, Especially the Energetic Animal Rescue League of Boston

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

A WAIL of despondency comes to me from a woman in New York regarding all the S. P. C. A. and other humane societies. She feels they are doing nothing, comparatively, to stem the tide of cruelty which sweeps over our Christian land.

Another correspondent wants to know if I can do anything to better the conditions on Blackwell's Island. I quote from her letter:

"A worthy woman was taken sick with erysipelas and forced to go to the Metropolitan Hospital. But a letter from her states that she was compelled to sleep on the floor without a pillow because of the crowded condition of the ward."

My correspondent asks if a subscription could not be started to relieve such a condition of affairs. It might be well for the statement of the patient to be looked into. It is through such complaints that reforms are often brought about in our public institutions.

William H. Briggs of Oakland, Cal., was an orphan boy, sent out by some society to the far West and given a "home," or what often serves as an excuse for that word to poor orphan children.

And all through the heart-hungry boyhood of that poor, lonely boy's early life he prayed for success, that he might devote his future to some method of making the world brighter for such children as himself.

Orphan's Home.

HE has reached that point now, as we all reach that goal that we concentrate upon, and he is establishing the Agricultural School Home for Orphans at Oakland, Cal. The school is free, and international; the age of admittance from five to twelve; the pupils are to remain until twenty-one. Agriculture in all branches will be taught. Donations from philanthropic men and women are hoped for to extend the good work, as he is only able to start it himself.

As our cities are crowded with orphans, it would be wise for all who are associated with such institutions to write Mr. Briggs, P. O. Box 144, Oakland, Cal., and to see what they can do to interest others in his enterprise.

Passing through Mexico recently and stopping for a few hours at a small town I was surprised to see a fair-faced boy squatting on the floor of a Mexican hut surrounded by Mexican Indians. Inquiry proved that this boy had been one of the Eastern orphans shipped to "a good home in the West" by the agencies conducting these matters.

Hundreds and thousands of such cases can be found all over the United States.

Poor babies, poor babies! May God prosper the enterprise of Mr. Briggs, who, from the Gethsemane of his own experience, has risen with a Christ-like desire to save the suffering world of orphans from miseries worse than death.

Meantime there is nothing gained in contemplating the sad things in the world through despondent eyes.

Animal Rescue.

THERE were never so many philanthropical, sympathetic and generous people in the world at one time as there are to-day. There were never so many organized efforts being made to relieve distress and eliminate cruelty from the earth.

While the S. P. C. A. does not do all it could, or should, with the amount of money at its command, it does an enormous amount of good. And other societies are doing all they can in other ways.

The humane association is doing great educational work.

Anna Harris Smith of Boston, that angel in the work for animals, with the aid of her Animal Rescue League, has in the last year cared for 15,78[illegible] sick, homeless animals.

Homes have been found for the healthy and a merciful death bestowed upon the diseased.

Many hundred dogs and cats have been restored to owners, and 1,359 animals have been put in good homes through the efforts of this one woman and her league.

Send to this good angel for humane literature and give it to your drivers of delivery wagons, to your domestics, to your clergymen and children.

You can do active service for the cause of kindness by taking this little amount of trouble.

Address, Animal Rescue League, No. 51 Carver street, Boston, Mass.

Hope against hope and ask till ye receive.
JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Little Editorials from the People

AN "ANTE-MORTEM BOUQUET"

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Truly your editorial on "Those That Carry the Babies" was an expose of the heart of the writer that is as pleasing as it is rare—among writers. His editorials on homely topics, with their helpful lessons, are doing great good. He sees, hears and feels the woes that afflict his fellows, and can also "rejoice with them that do rejoice." I doff my hat to him and send this "ante-morten bouquet" that he may know his work is appreciated by

A SUBWAY OR NOTHING FOR CAMBRIDGE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A subway or nothing, that should be the motto of the people of Cambridge. An elevated would spoil the streets and the beauty of the city. Save Cambridge from a nuisance. If the people of Cambridge want rapid transit then let them build their own subway, as they want it, and then lease it. There is a need and let that need be met in accordance with the best interests of the people of the city of Cambridge.
